INTRODUCTION

It has been well said by Brogniart,¹ one of the pioneers in ceramic research, that there is no branch of industry—viewed in reference to its history, theory and practice—which offers more that is of interest, with regard alike to its economic application and to its scientific aspect, than the ceramic or plastic art; none affording products more simple and varied, more easy of manufacture, and, notwithstanding their fragility, more durable.

In its origin it goes back to a period well-nigh unappreciable to the lay mind. In Egypt, for example, pottery was made by the aborigines from the earliest period of which we have record. As early as her Predynastic Era, at a time when the potter’s wheel was unknown, objects of fine pottery, graceful in form, sometimes painted by hand, were manufactured in great quantities. More astonishing than this is the fact that as early as the time of Mena, Egypt’s first historic king, the potters of the Two Lands were masters of the technical processes necessary to the covering of their wares with a hard, vitreous or glass glaze.

At this time, some 3,400 years B.C., the Egyptian potter was able to manufacture most pretentious vessels, as witness the jar covered with a rich green cupreous glaze and inlaid in purple with Mena’s name, found at Abydos in 1903 by Dr. Flinders Petrie.²

The skill of the Egyptians of the New Empire, 1500 B.C., is attested by many remarkable objects, both useful and ornamental, objects glazed in as many as seven different colors and in some cases enriched with inlaid designs in one, two or even three distinct shades. Many of the colors and designs in use among the ancient Egyptians seem to have descended to the mediaeval potters of Syria, Spain and Egypt. Egypt, through its conquest by Cambyses, early influenced the ceramic art of Persia. At a later date—some­time between the ninth and twelfth century of our era—the Persians received a second inspiration from Egypt. We allude to the art of metallic lustre which, without doubt, was first discovered by the Saracens of Egypt.

It seems certain that the influence of the Saracenic potters helped to bring about the impetus in the ceramic art so noticeable in Italy during the last years of the fifteenth and the early years of the six­teenth century. Arrived in Italy, however, all traces of Eastern influence were quickly lost. At once the art became permeated with the touch of the oncoming Renaissance. Adopted with such marvellous results by Luca Della Robbia, the wares of the stanniferous type may be said to have reached their perfection at the hands of the Andreoli of Gubbio. These added to the exquisitely painted designs—alone made possible by its use—a gorgeous, lustred finish in brightest tones of ruby, gold or mother-of-pearl. From Italy the impetus in ceramic production spread quickly. Factories sprang up in France, Germany and England. Many beautiful objects in pottery, stoneware and the like were produced by all, yet up to this point there has been no mention of porcelain.

In Europe the hard paste porcelain of the Chinese was known, and its beauties and economic possibilities appreciated as early as the latter part of the sixteenth century. It is composed of two im­portant ingredients called by the Chinese petuntse and kaolin. The first is a mixture of feldspath and quartz; the second, a clay which, having the power of binding the paste together, enables it to be fired at the highest temperature without risk of softening. Besides this it possesses one other important endowment, the gift of adding transparency to the finished piece. In the attempts of the Euro­pean potters to discover the ingredients necessary to the making of porcelain, the importance of the part played by kaolin is strikingly illustrated by an incident quoted by the Jesuit Père d’Entre­colles.

Chinese connoisseurs and certain eminent sinologues of the West attribute the discovery of porcelain to the period of the T’ang dynasty, that is, to the early seventh century. Others would have its discovery assigned to the reign of the Sung emperors—that is to say, from the tenth to the thirteenth century. Yet the earliest dated examples of Chinese porcelain are from the reign of the Ming emperor Yung-lo, who occupied the throne of the Middle Kingdom from the year 1403 to 1424. It was manufactured in many different places, but chiefly at the famous factory of Ching-tê-chên. Here, throughout the entire period of the Ming emperors—that is to say, from 1368 to 1643—objects in the finest porcelain were turned out in vast quantities.

With examples of the late blue-and-white Ming ware Europe was already familiar. Dutch and Portuguese merchants, anticipating a ready market, filled their vessels with the eagerly sought productions of the Chinese potters. At once the chemists and potters of Europe essayed to reproduce them. The first result of their experiments was an artificial or soft paste porcelain, the pâte tendre of the French. Experiments were conducted as early as 1580 in a private factory established in the Boboli Gardens, by Francis I, Grand Duke of Tuscany. In England, Dwight of Fulham, in the year 1671, applied for a patent for its manufacture. The French potters at Saint Cloud, produced the first results of their experiments about the year 1695. Holland was content, at least for a time, to imitate the wares of the Chinese by means of enameled earthenware alone.

It was not until the accidental discovery of the “white earth of Aue” by a certain Schnorr in 1711 that the manufacture of true porcelain, the hard paste porcelain of the Chinese ceramist, became a possibility. The analysis and detection of the true nature of this earth by the chemist Böttcher, and his subsequent experiments with it at the factory instituted under royal patronage at Meissen, led to the first production of true hard paste porcelain in Europe, about the year 1716.

The Metropolitan Museum is rich in the wares of the Oriental ceramist. The purchase of the Avery and the Colman Collections; the gift of a well-chosen collection of Japanese pottery and porcelain by the late Charles Stewart Smith, the small, but choice collection in the Edward C. Moore room, another valuable gift; the loan collection of Japanese pottery and porcelain belonging to Mr. V. Everit Macy, and last but far from least, the unrivalled collection of Chinese pottery and porcelain loaned by the President of the Museum, Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan, form a collection in its entirety most significant of the refined taste and extraordinary skill possessed by the potters of the Far East.

On the other hand, in examples of the productions of the European potters, as in those of the ceramist of the Near East, the Museum is weak, and this in spite of many valuable gifts from such generous and interested donors as the Rev. Alfred Duane Pell, and the late President of the Museum, Mr. Henry C. Marquand. At the present moment many of the best known English, German, French, Austrian and Spanish fabriques are most inadequately represented. Redeeming features in these sections, however, are the loan of twenty-five magnificent examples of early Italian majolica, through the kindness of Mr. V. Everit Macy, a collection of the faïence of Asia Minor and Persia presented by Mr. W. B. Osgood Field, and a considerable number of the mediaeval wares of Persia, Mesopotamia, Syria and Egypt, which have of late been purchased.

In so far as is practicable, the arrangement of the catalogue is chronological, beginning as is fitting, with the ceramic productions of the Far East. Yet the introduction of certain collections, such as the Edward Clarence Moore Bequest, and the Japanese Collection, the gift of the late Charles Stewart Smith, two important collections which we have endeavored to keep as far as possible distinct, has somewhat broken the continuity at which we aimed.

The arrangement of the objects themselves similarly requires a word of explanation. Instead of a "Ceramic Gallery" the major part of the collections will now be found in rooms or sections devoted to other objects of like provenance and epoch. And since lack of space forbids the exhibition of the entire ceramic collection, it is intended to change the objects from time to time.

Before closing, we wish to acknowledge the assistance of Professor Edward C. Morse, of Boston, to whose valuable notes on the faïence of the Moore, Colman and Smith Collections we had access. For the benefit of the general public, we may add that the entire list of books mentioned in the bibliography is to be found in the Library of the Museum.
Wherever possible objects are dated according to the period of the individual piece, not by that of the fabrique alone.

February 10, 1910.

1969 PART OF A DADO. Three panels composed of one hundred and twelve enameled close red brick tiles, representing European merchants petitioning a lady of the royal household to gain them admittance to the Shah’s palace. The reception of the Europeans takes place in the palace garden, where they are seen drinking wine with their hostess. Servants of the merchant stand behind him bearing rich bribes in the shape of rare vases and costly shawls. These tiles are doubtless the work of Chinese artists imported to do the work by the then reigning monarch, Shah Abbas I. The border, the cloud-pattern design and other details are of purely Chinese character. Isphahan, 1586-1628. Lengths 78, 55 and 63 in.; heights 38, 48 and 40 in. Purchase, 1903.

2135 EWER AND DISH (Dal' antico). At centres in blue and yellow on white are the arms of the Benuoglientii (?) of Siena. The pieces are fluted in the paste, covered throughout with a thick white enamel and enriched with gilt. Pieces may not improbably be attributed to Venice.
Height of ewer, 16 in.; diameter of dish, 17 in.
Purchase, 1904.

Height 7¾ in. Gift of W. B. Osgood Field, 1902.

URBINO
FIRST HALF XVI CENTURY

2137 PLATE (Piatto con fondo). Decorated in the richest yellows, greens, orange, black and blue on white with a scene representing Diana at the Chase. Below, two shields bear the arms of Gonzaga-d'Este. This plate is one of a set painted by Nicola d'Urbino for Isabella d'Este, wife of Gian Francesco Gonzaga, Marquis of Mantua. On scrolls is inscribed the motto of Isabella d'Este "Nec spe nec metu." This plate and others somewhat similar now in the British Museum, the Museum at Bologna, and a ewer in the collection of the Baron Alphonse de Rothschild, were probably made before 1519, in which year the Marquis died.
Diameter 11 in. Purchase, 1904.

2140 INKSTAND (?). In form of a violin, having movable drawer within, decorated in the richest enamels of the fabrique. On top is moulded the figure of a dragon. About 1535. Length 10½ in. Castellani Collection. Purchase, 1884.

2141 PLATE (Piatto con fondo). Richly enameled in brilliant yellow, orange, blue, green and black with a design representing Adam and Eve after the expulsion from Eden. Probably the work of Nicola d’Urbino. About 1535. Diameter 10 in. Purchase, 1904.

2143 PLATE (Piatto con fondo). Enameled in the richest color of the fabrique with a scene from the classic myth concerning the god Vulcan and the love of Venus his wife for Mars, god of War. Inscribed on back: “De Volgano et Venara 1542,” and probably painted by Orazio Fontana. Diameter 10½ in. Purchase, 1904.
NO. 2145
PLATE. MAJOLICA. SUBJECT: "THE RAPE OF PROSERPINE."
URBINO GUBBIO LUSTRED, ITALY. DATED, 1544.
2144 PLATE (Piatto con fondo). Decorated with scene of Vulcan at his forge gazed at in awe by Venus his wife, and in fear by little Cupid, who shrinks behind his mother's skirts. Inscribed on back: "Vulcano alla fucina abolle botte", and below "fabula". By a pupil of Xanto. About 1540–1545.

Purchase, 1904.

2145 PLATE (Piatto con fondo, senza piede). Subject: The Rape of Proserpina. Enamelled in the richest colors of the fabrique and embellished with ruby and mother-of-pearl lustre. A beautiful example of Urbino majolica enriched with Gubbio lustre, the Urbino potters making no attempt to add such lustrous reflets to their strikingly brilliant enamels but always sending them to the factory of the famed brothers Andreoli at Gubbio. Piece is dated in the year 1544. Illustrated. Diameter 9\(\frac{1}{4}\) in.

Purchase, 1904.

2146 PLATE (Piatto senza fondo, con piede). Poorly enamelled in yellows, black, blue and green is a representation of the Death of Hero, most naively conceived. The heroine is seen leaping from a window into a stream that flows beside her house; floating by is the rigid body of the hapless Lysander. On the back is inscribed: Liandere and date 1545.

Diameter 9 in. Castellani Collection.

Purchase, 1884.

2147 DISH (Tazza). In the richest colors of the fabrique is enamelled the Adoration of the Magi. Piece is probably the work of Orazio Fontana, sometime between 1540–1545.

Diameter 7\(\frac{1}{4}\) in.

Purchase, 1904.

2148 PLATE (Piatto con fondo). In gorgeous tones of yellow and orange, broken here and there by the addition of a rich black and dark green, this plate is painted with a story taken from an incident connected with the campaign of Scipio Africanus before Carthage. The young wife of a Carthaginian prisoner has journeyed to the camp of the great Roman general to beg for her husband's life and release. Probably the work of Orazio Fontana, as it is marked with an O within a square panel.

Diameter 10\(\frac{1}{4}\) in. Gift of H. G. Marquand, 1891.

PITCHER (Boccalo) of griffin form. In centre of tail aperture into which liquid was poured; on being tipped liquid issued from mouth. Enamelled in yellows, green and orange. Poor work of about 1560-1600. Length 8 in. Purchase, 1904.

VASE (Albarello da speziera). Decorated in green, orange, blue and yellow enamels with a design of a church amid trees and inscribed on a scroll: Dia Cathlico. Height 7¾ in. Gift of H. G. Marquand, 1891.
NO. 2149
PLATE. MAJOLICA. SUBJECT: "THE DEATH OF ACHILLES."
URBINO, ITALY, ABOUT 1540-1545.

2159 SHALLOW DISH (Tazza). Coarsely executed design representing Circe's attempt to lure Ulysses to the magic island of Æaea. Enamedled in green, blue and black dominated by orange and yellow grounds. Diameter 9 in. Purchase, 1904.

2720 FRUIT DISH. Queen's ware, with reticulated basket-work decoration at sides, same moulded in paste at centre. Height 3¾ in. Gift of Garrett Chatfield Pier, 1908.

2721 COVERED CUP. White biscuit body, glazed inside, two handled, floral oil-gilt decoration. Made just before Wedgwood's partnership with Bentley, or about 1765–68. Experimental piece. Height 3¼ in. Rogers Fund, 1909.

2722 SCENT BOTTLE. Blue and white jasper ware, decorated with figure and floral designs in low relief. Wedgwood and Bentley, 1768–1780. Height 2¼ in. Rogers Fund, 1908.

CAMEO MEDALLION. Dark blue and white jasper, decorated with the figure of Euterpe, after Flaxman. About 1775. Height 2½ in. Rogers Fund, 1908.

PEDESTAL. Blue and white jasper, square form, having compartments filled in with figures of nymphs, after Webber, with griffins, rams’ horns, and floral designs, aiming to be classical, but in fact of mediaeval character and style. Mark: as above. About 1785–1790. Height 6¼ in. Rogers Fund, 1908.

PLAQUE. BLUE AND WHITE JASPER. SUBJECT: "AN OFFERING TO FLORA."
WEDGWOOD, ETRURIA, ENGLAND, ABOUT 1785-1790.
2732 PLAQUE FOR FIRE-PLACE. White jasper, decorated with relief design representing the aged Priam begging the body of the slain Hector from Achilles. The white reliefs (stained) are on a deep green ground (much repaired). The design itself is taken from a wax copy by Pacetti of a bas-relief found upon the back of the sarcophagus of the Roman Emperor Severus Alexander. Mark: Wedgwood. Design is figured in Rathbone's Wedgwood, Plate XI. About 1789. Height 6 in., length 15¼ in. Rogers Fund, 1909.

2733 ORNAMENTAL (HOMERIC) VASE. Solid blue jasper, oval form, standing on a square plinth and decorated in relief in white jasper with a design which may be called "Niké Crowning the Victorious Contestant on the Lyre," and not, as commonly, "The Apotheosis of Homer." This design was copied direct by Flaxman from an antique red-figured krater now in the British Museum (E 460), a vase that formerly belonged to Sir William Hamilton. It shows a musician standing to right, facing Niké, one foot still resting upon the platform upon which he has stood. In his left arm he holds the lyre, resting it upon his knee; the plectrum is seen in his right hand. The other male figure, seated at the extreme right, and clad in the gracefully draped folds of a Doric cloak, is the judge of the contest. Behind the musician are two female figures, a winged genius descending in haste, and a seated figure wearing the sleeveless chiton, her hair caught up by an embroidered kerchief. On the opposite side of the vase is a design, unusual on vases of this description, representing Minerva in full panoply, lacking the spear, framed in a Doric portal over which towers an enormous palm. The piece is further ornamented with honeysuckle, oak-wreath, and trellis pattern at neck, base and plinth, with outflaring snake and Medusa-head handles, and, surmounting the cover, a well-modeled Pegasus in white jasper. The main design was modeled by Flaxman sometime during the year 1777, but the piece was probably not made before 1785-1790, when most of the larger and finer ornamented jasper vases were made. Mark: Wedgwood, 3. Illustrated. Height 18½ in. Sanderson Collection. Rogers Fund, 1910.

2734 FLOWER VASE AND PEDESTAL. White jasper body, krater form without handles, dipped in pale celadon green, and having relief designs of eight winged cupids playing various musical instruments, children doubtless modeled by Flaxman, who excelled in rendering the sturdy limbs and artless grace of childhood. Above the cupids, and immediately below the outflaring flange, is a band of honey-suckle pattern and oak-draped masks, while below is a fluted band running into a beaded circle at jointure of body and foot. Honey-suckle band about foot (repaired). Floral festoon and patera about the circular Pedestal. Mark: as above. Same period. Height Vase 10½ in., Pedestal 3½ in. Rogers Fund, 1910.

2735 VASE. Black and white jasper, a late copy of an ancient Roman (Alexandrine) vase now in the British Museum—the Barberini or Portland Vase. About 1840–1860. Height 8½ in.
