Preface

The first eighteenth-century Italian drawings to enter the museum’s collection came more than one hundred years ago. Twenty-eight were the gift of Cornelius Vanderbilt in 1880, and seven were presented by Cephas G. Thompson in 1887. Thirteen drawings of this period were acquired in the first decades of the twentieth century. Then in 1937 the museum purchased in Geneva the collection of the marquis de Biron (Guillaume de Gontaut Biron, 1839–1939), which was extraordinarily rich in Venetian drawings of the eighteenth century. In this catalogue forty-nine of the fifty-six drawings by Giovanni Battista Tiepolo, sixteen of the twenty-three by Giovanni Domenico Tiepolo, and twenty-one of the thirty-two by Francesco Guardi come from the Biron collection. After this major acquisition, purchasing was sporadic until the Department of Drawings was established as a separate curatorial division of the museum in 1961. Since that time 124 drawings—more than forty percent of those included in this catalogue—have been acquired by purchase, gift, or bequest.

All drawings in the collection that we feel may be plausibly attributed to known artists of the period are described and reproduced. Old copies and sheets of (for us) dubious authenticity have been excluded. A question mark after an artist’s name in a catalogue heading indicates that there are legitimate doubts concerning the attribution. Six still anonymous drawings of considerable interest are included in the hope that their appearance will elicit new attributions. Descriptive notices are intentionally brief to allow maximum space for reproduction. The entries offer essential bibliographical references and a record of provenance, with dealers indicated in brackets. The Italian drawings of this period in the Robert Lehman Collection at The Metropolitan Museum of Art are not illustrated here because they have been reproduced and described in an exemplary catalogue by James Byam Shaw and George Knox (1987).

This book is dedicated to our late colleague Lawrence Turčić (1949–1988), an exceptionally gifted connoisseur of Italian drawings. At the time of his sudden death he was engaged in the compilation of some of the very first entries for this publication, to which he contributed eight astute new attributions.
We are grateful to Calvin Brown, Helen Mules, and Henrietta Susser, members of the staff of the Department of Drawings, for their invaluable assistance. Helen K. Otis, Conservator in Charge, Paper Conservation, has generously given us useful technical information. We are indebted to the many scholars whose suggestions and attributions are recorded in the entries that follow; particular acknowledgment is due to Henry Bertels, S.J., Leonard Boyle, O.P., James Byam Shaw, Mimi Cazort, Jennifer Montagu, Mary Newcome, and Janos Scholz.

ANDREA APPIANI

Milan 1734—Milan 1817

1. Aurora Riding in Her Chariot

Pen and brown ink, brown wash, over black chalk. 18.8 x 29.0 cm. Right margin irregular.

Inscribed in graphite on verso, Aurora—Andrea Appiani—Fresco in Casa Passalacqua Via Morone—Mila... / 2.

Purchase, General Atlantic Corporation and Christina Turcic Latrowski Gifts, in memory of Lawrence Turcic, 1988

The drawing comes very close to and is probably preparatory for a fresco of oval format formerly in the Casa Passalacqua, Milan (Beretta, 1848, p. 167). The fresco was engraved by Michele Bisi in 1820. According to the description that accompanies the engraving, the Casa Passalacqua was in the contrada del Morone, and the fresco by Appiani measured 1.19 by 2.42 meters. The building in question must be what is now known as the Palazzo Marchetti, via Morone no. 2, in Milan. This palace suffered grave losses during the bombardments of 1943, and Appiani's fresco appears to have been destroyed at that time.

A study by Appiani for the figure of Aurora with a torch in her raised right hand is in the Gallerie dell'Accademia, Venice (Nicodemi, 1915, pl. XXXIX). In the Philadelphia Museum of Art there is a pen sketch for the whole composition which differs from our drawing and the fresco as executed in that Aurora is represented standing, not seated, in her chariot (1984-56-342; Gernsheim photograph 90446).
ANDREA APPIANI

2. The Muses Thalia and Erato

Black chalk, squared in black chalk. 47.9 x 33.9 cm. Inscribed in black chalk near upper margin, thalia and erato.

PROVENANCE: [Colnaghi]; purchased in London in 1988.

Purchase, Mrs. Carl L. Selden Gift, in memory of Carl L. Selden, 1988

1988.145

Study for the two dancing muses that appear on the left in Appiani’s fresco Apollo and the Muses on Parnassus. This painting decorates the ceiling of the sala da pranzo of the Villa Reale in Milan, now the seat of the Galleria d’Arte Moderna (Percerutti-Garberi, 1969–1, pl. 1, in color; Cera, 1987, pl. 54). Signed and dated 1811, the Parnassus was commissioned from the artist by Eugène de Beauharnais, Viceroy of Italy, and executed in only forty days—a miraculously short time, according to Appiani’s principal biographer (Beretta, 1848, pp. 282, 283, 286).

The two muses in our drawing are quite close in pose to those in the fresco. In the painting, however, opaque draperies replace the revealing, transparent veils of this study. The same near-nudity characterizes the figures in No. 3 below.

3. The Muses Euterpe, Polymnia, Calliope, Clio, and Terpsichore

Black chalk, squared in red chalk. Verso: black chalk sketch of a sleeping child. 47.8 x 33.8 cm. Inscribed in black chalk, clockwise from upper left, euterpe, Pollinia, ree, Calliope, Clio, terpsicore, giaia.

PROVENANCE: [Colnaghi]; purchased in London in 1989.

Purchase, Mrs. Carl L. Selden Gift, in memory of Carl L. Selden, 1989

1989.25

Study for the five muses that appear on the right in the Parnassus of the Villa Reale in Milan (see No. 2 above). A similar study for Apollo and the muses Melpomene and Urania who appear in the center of the composition must have existed, but its present whereabouts is unknown. The cartoon for the whole fresco that belonged to the Pinacoteca di Brera was unfortunately destroyed in the aerial bombardment of Milan in August 1943 (repr. Malaguzzi Valeri, 1906, IIa, p. 143).

CARLO ALBERTO BARATTA

Genoa 1754—Genoa 1815

4. Study for the Decoration of a Vault

Point of brush, gray wash, heightened with white, over traces of black chalk, on gray-green prepared paper. 25.3 x 40.7 cm. All four corners cut away.

PROVENANCE: [Colnaghi]; purchased in London in 1988.

Purchase, Gifts in memory of Lawrence Turcić, 1988

1988.250

Mary Newcome recognized the drawing as a study for Baratta’s fresco in the vault of the chapel of St. Anne in the now-destroyed church of S. Maria della Pace, Genoa. The nineteenth-century Genoese art historian Alizieri gives high praise to Baratta’s decorations in this chapel, which he implies were executed about 1796 (Alizieri, Notizie, II, pp. 108–109).

According to Alizieri, St. Anne in a glory of angels appeared in the center of the vault, and the spandrels were occupied by four prophets—Isaiah, Job, Ezekiel, and Jeremiah. In this preparatory drawing, King David, with crown and harp, takes the place of one of the prophets.

POMPEO BATONI

Lucca 1708—Rome 1787

5. Three Nude Male Figures; Study of the Right Hand of the Figure on the Left

Red chalk. 20.9 x 30.4 cm. Scattered stains. Lined.

PROVENANCE: Madame Galippe; Fritz Haussmann; Countess Finkenstein (see Clark and Bowron, 1985, p. 377); [Yvonne ffrench]; Harry G. Sperling.

Bequest of Harry G. Sperling, 1971

1975.131.5

Nude studies for three of the Apostles that appear on the left in Christ Giving the Keys to St. Peter, a painting in the ceiling of the Casino del Giardino, Palazzo del Quirinale, Rome (Clark and Bowron, 1985, pl. 59; Titi, 1987, II, fig. 1092). In the painting, which dates from 1742 to 1743, the Apostles wear heavy draperies.
POMPEO BATONI

6. Allegory in Honor of Pope Benedict XIV

Red chalk, heightened with white, on beige paper. 36.1 x 24.9 cm. Lined.

PROVENANCE: Cavaeppi (according to Lagoy); marquis de Lagoy (Lugt 1710; no. 137 in the manuscript inventory of the Lagoy collection); sale, London, Sotheby’s, June 19, 1973, no. 229, pl. 3; purchased by the Metropolitan Museum.

Rogers Fund, 1973
1973.156

The design is an allegorical homage to the highly cultivated Pope Benedict XIV Lambertini, who reigned from 1740 to 1758. The winged figure of Fame with a trumpet is assisted by two putti in holding aloft a portrait medallion of the pontiff. Of the four allegorical figures occupying the foreground, the most conspicuous is that of Theology seated on a celestial globe. She has two visages—the younger looking up to heaven, the older looking down at the earth. Her companions probably represent, from left to right, the Trivium, the Quadrivium, and Philosophy. We are grateful to Michael Evans for suggesting the identification of these three figures.

St. Peter’s is in the background at the right, while just to the left of center appears the fifteenth-century octagonal lantern of the Arcispedale di S. Spirito in Sassia. Benedict XIV added a large wing to this ancient hospital. The addition (pulled down in the twentieth century), decorated with frescoes by Gregorio Guglielmi, was completed in time to figure on Giambattista Nolfi’s 1748 plan of Rome (Titi, 1763, p. 26). The façade of Benedict’s addition to the hospital is seen on the right, just beyond the Ponte S. Angelo and below the dome of St. Peter’s.

The drawing was engraved in the same direction with the inscriptions Pomp. Batoni inv. et del. and I. Frey inc. Romae 1745. The Metropolitan Museum possesses an impression of this undescribed print (Department of Prints and Photographs, 1973.648. Gift of Anthony M. Clark).

BERNARDO BELLOTTO

Venice 1721–Warsaw 1780

7. Padua from the East, with S. Francesco and the Salone

Pen and brown ink, over graphite. 19.0 x 27.1 cm. Scattered stains.

PROVENANCE: Ludwig Heinrich Bojanus; acquired in 1829 by the Hessisches Landesmuseum, Darmstadt (mark similar to Lugt Supp. 1257–c on verso, as well as Darmstadt inventory number, AE2183); sold or exchanged by that museum between 1936 and 1945; sale, Lucerne, Galerie Fischer, June 2, 1945, no. 10, pl. 2, as Antonio Canale; [Kleinberger], Walter C. Baker.

BERNARDO BELLOTTO (NO. 7)

Bequest of Walter C. Baker, 1971
1972.118.242

Free copy of a composition by Bellotto’s uncle and master, Canaletto (Giovanni Antonio Canal). Two drawings of this view by Canaletto have survived: one—in pen outline—is at Windsor Castle; the other—in pen and ink with wash—is in the collection of Mrs. Douglas Williams, New York (Constable, 1976, nos. 680 and 681, repr.). Bellotto’s drawing is closer to the version at Windsor.

8. S. Simeone Piccolo, Venice, Seen from the Grand Canal

Pen and brown ink, over traces of black chalk. 26.6 x 37.4 cm. Scattered stains.

Numbered in pen and brown ink at upper right, 24; in point of brush and red wash, 10a. On verso, several inscriptions including: in pen and brown ink, lacagion dela mia pena [?], and in graphite, S. Simon piccolo.

PROVENANCE: Ludwig Heinrich Bojanus; acquired in 1829 by the Hessisches Landesmuseum, Darmstadt (mark similar to Lugs Supp. 1237c-c on verso, as well as Darmstadt inventory number, AE22093); sold or exchanged by that museum between 1936 and 1948; sale, Lucerne, Galerie Fischer, November 30, 1956, no. 442, repr., as Canaletto; Harry G. Sperling.

Bequest of Harry G. Sperling, 1971
1975.131.7

Free copy of a drawing by Canaletto in a private collection (Constable, 1976, II, no. 622b; repr. Matthiesen, 1939, no. 126, lent by C. R. and A. P. Rudolf). In a comparable drawn view of S. Simeone Piccolo by Canaletto that is preserved at Windsor Castle the light falls from the left, not from the right as here, and the boats in the foreground differ (Constable, 1976, no. 622, repr.).

Franca Zava Bocazzi has pointed out similarities in style between this drawing and the feigned reliefs painted in monochrome by Bison as overdoors in the Palazzo Manzoni, Padua. These decorations are dated between 1787 and 1790 by Zava Bocazzi (Arte Veneta, XXII, 1968, figs. 211 and 215).

13. The Departure of St. Paula and St. Eustoichium for the Holy Land

Red chalk; squared in black chalk. 40.4 x 24.5 cm. The sheet was considerably foiled at the time of its acquisition by the museum; this condition has since been minimized.

Inscribed in pen and brown ink at lower margin, fatto da Giuseppe Botani Lanno 1740 e il Quadro eseguito per S. Damianiano alla Scuola in Milano; numbered in white chalk on old mount (now detached), N. 103 and N. 33.

PROVENANCE: Carlo Prager (Lugt 2044); Juan and Felix Bernasconi (according to Christie’s); inscribed in pen and blue ink on verso, María... Méndez de Bernasconi / 1777; sale, London, Christie’s, April 1, 1987, no. 92, repr., “St. Helena with Attendants”; John Morton Morris.

Gift of John Morton Morris, 1987
1987.245

To the right of the Roman widow St. Paula stands her daughter St. Eustoichium, who accompanied her to the Holy Land to join St. Jerome. Paula’s daughter Rufina kisses her mother’s hand in farewell, and Paula’s son Toxotius kneels at the right. The drawing is a squared study with minor variations for a painting by Bottani, signed and dated 1745, that is now in the Pinacoteca di Brera, Milan (Perina, 1961, p. 52, fig. 1).

The painting, executed in Rome, was commissioned by the Hieronymites for their now-destroyed Milanese church, SS. Cosma e Damiano. For this church the Hieronymites also commissioned a Holy Family with Saints from Pompeo Batoni (Clark and Bowron, 1985, cat. no. 29, pl. 32) and a Vision of St. Jerome and a Crucifixion with Saints from Pierre Subleyras (Rosenberg and Michel, 1987, nos. 66 and 85, repr.). These three paintings are also preserved in the Brera.

An oil sketch by Subleyras in Newcastle-upon-Tyne has been identified by Pierre Rosenberg and Olivier Michel as a study for a representation of the Departure of St. Paula, and they suggest that Subleyras may have been considered for the commission that went in fact to Bottani (Rosenberg and Michel, 1987, no. 65, repr.).

An oil sketch for Bottani’s Departure of St. Paula, closer to the finished painting than to our drawing, is now in a private collection in New York (sale, New York, Sotheby’s, January 17, 1986, no. 67, repr.). Stefano Susinno has pointed out that in the Gabinetto Nazionale delle Stampe, Rome, there is a drawing for the group of angels at the top of the painting (Antologia di Belle Arti, II, 7–8, 1978, p. 311, note 11).

14. Design for a Tomb

Pen and brown ink, gray wash, over traces of graphite. 40.0 x 27.0 cm., including the blank borders of the sheet that measure about 3.5 cm.

Inscribed in pen and brown ink at lower left, Petrus Bracci Rom. F.; in pen and red ink at lower center, Scala di Palmi Otto Romani / c 2 3 4 5 6 7 8.

Purchase, Florence and Carl Selden Foundation, Inc. Gift, 1966 66.139.1

In this and the following drawing, Bracci proposes alternative solutions for the tomb of Cardinal Carlo Leopoldo Calcagnini in S. Andrea delle Fratte, Rome, commissioned by the cardinal’s nephew Teofilo. The cardinal died in 1746 and the monument was completed in 1748. The present drawing comes closest to the tomb as executed, where an allegorical female figure of History inscribes the cardinal’s epitaph on an obelisk supported by two lions and ornamented by a painted portrait of the deceased prelate (Wittkower, 1965, pl. 168A; Titi, 1987, 11, fig. 1201).

15. Design for a Tomb

Pen and brown ink, brown and gray wash, heightened with white, over graphite. 39.7 x 26.8 cm., including the blank borders of the sheet that measure about 3.5 cm.

Inscribed in pen and brown ink at lower left, Petrus Bracci Rom. F.; in pen and red ink at lower center, Scala di Palmi Sei / c 2 3 4 5 6.

Purchase, Florence and Carl Selden Foundation, Inc. Gift, 1966 66.139.2

17. The Dead Christ Mourned by St. Mary Magdalene
VERSÓ. The Holy Family with an Attendant Angel

Pen and brown ink, on beige paper (recto); black chalk (verso). 13.2 x 16.1 cm.
Inscribed in pen and brown ink at lower left, Cadel; at lower right margin, Cades (the lower part cut off); numbered in graphite at lower left, 30.

PROVENANCE: Cephas G. Thompson.

BIBLIOGRAPHY: Metropolitan Museum Handbook, 1895, p. 46, no. 827, "Cadel.—The Dead Christ and Mary."
Gift of Cephas G. Thompson, 1887 87.12.157

Maria Teresa Caracciolo Arizzoli kindly informs us that the inscription Cades, in part cut off at the lower right margin, is a signature. The Cadel that appears at lower left has been added by a later hand and is a mistaken transcription of the artist’s name.

18. The Virgin Immaculate with the Christ Child

Pen and brown ink, brown and gray wash, over black chalk. 44.9 x 30.7 cm. Lined.

Inscribed in pen and black ink on reverse of old mount, Cherubino Alberti. / (Borgheggiano).

PROVENANCE: Illegible, unidentified collector's mark (not in Lugt); Anton Schmidt; Tan Bunzl; purchased in London in 1970.

Rogers Fund, 1970
1970.113.2

Cades represents the Virgin holding the Christ Child. She stands above the crescent moon, symbolic of her Immaculate Conception, and is attended by an angel, who makes a votive offering of hearts. At the left a youth protected by the Virgin recoils before a dragon.

Anthony M. Clark pointed out some years ago that there is a smaller drawing for this composition in the Museu Nacional de Arte Antiga, Lisbon (Inv. 2093). In the Lisbon drawing, executed in black and white chalk, the handling is broader and the figures are no more than mannequins.

Pen and brown ink, brown wash, over black chalk. 50.9 x 28.1 cm. Lined.

PROVENANCE: The Trustees of the Knole Settled Estates (according to Christie's); sale, London, Christie's, April 1, 1987, no. 108, repr. (subject incorrectly described); Aldega and Gordon; purchased in New York in 1988.

Maria Teresa Caracciolo Arizzoli related this drawing to a painting commissioned from Cades around 1790, which was once in a now-destroyed Franciscan house at Fabriano and is now in the church of St. Catherine in that city. The drawing corresponds quite closely, but not exactly, to the finished painting, for which it must be the definitive preparatory study or modello.

Francis Venimbeni of Fabriano (died about 1322) was a Franciscan priest with a particular devotion to holy souls in Purgatory. He was venerated from the time of his death, and his ancient cultus was approved by Pius VI in 1775. The Blessed Francis is shown celebrating a votive Mass. Behind him souls rise, with angelic assistance, from the cleansing fires of Purgatory.

This drawing was attributed to Giuseppe Cades when it was purchased in 1962. Its striking stylistic similarity to a drawing of three caryatids in the Musée Vivenel, Compiègne, ascribed in 1974 by Jacques Vilain and Richard J. Campbell to Jean-Guillaume Moitte (Paris, 1974, no. 102, repr.), led to the reattribution of our drawing to Moitte. Maria Teresa Caracciolo Arizzoli (in correspondence, 1988) agrees that both the Compiègne and New York drawings are by the same hand, but she argues very convincingly that they are characteristic examples of the figure style and draughtsmanship of Giuseppe Cades in the years 1770 to 1780.

Drawings such as these obviously had a strong influence on Moitte, who was in Rome at the French Academy from 1771 to 1775. In the Paris Salon of 1789 Moitte showed a highly finished drawing, now in Leningrad, representing the Judgment of Paris in a medallion flanked by caryatids that are clearly influenced by Cades, although they are stockier and less gracefully mannered in pose (Leningrad, 1971, no. 62, repr.).

CANALETTO (Giovanni Antonio Canal)

Venice 1697–Venice 1768

21. Capriccio with a Roman Triumphal Arch

Pen and brown ink, gray wash, over traces of graphite. 38.1 x 54.0 cm. Vertical crease at center.

PROVENANCE: Dominique-Vivant, baron Denon (Lugt 779); 4th Earl of Warwick (Lugt 2600); [Scharff]; purchased in New York in 1946.
The composition is dominated by a structure inspired by the still-extant Arch of the Sergii at Pula (Pola), Istria. This monument was etched by Piranesi, who represented it in a somewhat more dilapidated state (Bettagno, 1978, pl. 121).

22. Lagoon Capriccio

Pen and brown ink, gray wash, over traces of graphite. Faint architectural sketch in graphite at left of sheet. Verso: faint sketches in graphite of buildings along a Venetian canal, possibly the Rio S. Barnaba. 25.9 x 41.3 cm.

PROVENANCE: Dominique-Vivant, baron Denon (Lugt 779); Earl of Rosebery (according to Sotheby's); sale, London, Sotheby's, May 28, 1941, no. 83, repr.; [Durlacher]; purchased in New York in 1943.

There is a double-faced sheet of similar figure studies in the Courtauld Institute of Art, London. Both sides of the London drawing are inscribed, 11 / volta. The word volta no doubt indicates that the sheets should be turned, since they bear sketches on both sides (Constable, 1976, 1, pl. 159, 11, pp. 614–615, no. 839).

A number of pen and ink studies of groups of figures are related in style to the present drawing and the Courtauld sheet. They bear similar inscriptions and may have formed part of a dismembered sketchbook (see Bertonagno, 1982, under nos. 37–39).

MARCO CAPRINOZZI?
Civita Castellana or Vignanello 1711–Rome 1778

24. The Virgin Appearing to St. Joseph Calasancius

Black chalk, heightened with white, on gray prepared paper. 55.6 x 41.1 cm. Horizontal crease at center.

Illegible, partly effaced inscription in pen and brown ink on verso.

Joseph Calasancius (1556–1648) was beatified in 1748 and canonized in 1767. In 1617 he founded the Piarists (Scolopi), an order of Clerics Regular dedicated to the free education of young boys. Here he is represented commending some of his pupils to the Virgin and Child.

A painting of this subject by Marco Caprinozzzi is in SS. Stimmate di S. Francesco, Rome (Rudolph, 1983, pl. 129; Titi, 1987, 1, p. 93, 11, fig. 661). There the composition is reversed and the figures are differently arranged. The painting has a rounded top, while in the

The drawing seems to be a preparatory study with variations for a late fresco by Carlone in the cathedral at Asti, said to represent the martyrdom of St. Martinian. There is an oil sketch for the fresco in a private collection in Budapest (Barigozzi Brini and Garas, 1967, pp. 112 and 120, fig. 82).

In the Witt Collection, Courtauld Institute of Art, London, is a drawing of a scene of martyrdom, inscribed
96. Carloni, that is close to ours in style, technique, and dimensions (Inv. 1231). The design in London is a study for a pendant fresco by Carloni in the cathedral at Asti that represents the martyrdom of St. Secundus (Barigozzi Brini and Garas, 1967, pp. 112 and 124).

Inscriptions similar to the one on this drawing and No. 26 below—Carloni, preceded or followed by a number—occur on drawings by Carlo Carloni in a number of public and private collections (see Byam Shaw, 1983, 1, no. 427).

26. St. Lucy in Glory

Red and brown wash, over red chalk. 29.9 x 32.3 cm.

Inscribed in pen and brown ink at upper right, C. carloni 20.

St. Lucy stands at the center of the composition with a martyr's palm in her upraised right hand. At her left foot a putto holds her principal attribute, two eyes on a dish. To the right, an angel holds a sword, the instrument of her martyrdom. Above St. Lucy appears Christian Faith, identified by a cross and raised chalice. The drawing is no doubt a design for a ceiling decoration.
GERONIMO CENATIEMPO (or CENATEMPO)
Naples, active 1705–1742

27. The Virgin and Child Intervening for Victims of the Plague

Pen and brown ink, gray wash, over black chalk. Verso: small black chalk sketch of a seated female figure. 38.6 x 26.1 cm.

Inscribed in graphite at lower left, W̄3295 (a modern stock number); in pen and brown ink on verso in an old hand, Cenatiempo / S [?] 4.

PROVENANCE: [L'Art Ancien]; purchased in Zurich in 1966.

Rogers Fund, 1966

In the right foreground a man kneels in supplication for victims of the plague, personified by the figure of Death that flees to the left.

The old attribution to Cenatiempo of this drawing—marked by rather ragged pen work reflecting the style of Luca Giordano—seems plausible. No other drawings by Cenatiempo are known to us, but the physical types and gestures here are compatible with those in documented paintings by the artist, such as those in S. Bernardino, L'Aquila (Chierici, 1978, with seven unnumbered plates).

MICHELANGELO CERRUTI
Rome 1663–Rome 1748

28. The Martyrdom of St. Anastasia

Pen and brown ink, pale brown wash, heightened with white, over black chalk. 53.2 x 38.3 cm. Lined.

Van Day Truex Fund, 1989
1989.198

Robert Dance identified this drawing as a study by Cerruti for a ceiling painting in the nave of S. Anastasia, Rome (Rudolph, 1983, pl. 154; Titi, 1987, i, p. 46, ii, fig. 385). The outlines of the elaborately shaped field of the canvas are clearly established in the drawing. However, there are significant differences in the placement of all of the principal figures in the complex composition.

The Portuguese Cardinal Nuno da Cunha e Ataíde (1664–1750; created 1712) was named protector of S. Anastasia on June 16, 1721. At that time the church was apparently in a very dilapidated state, and he immediately ordered a new roof and a sumptuous wood ceiling at an initial cost of 4,000 scudi. This was followed by the commission given to Cerruti for the large ceiling canvas that he painted in twenty-eight days and which was in place by April 25, 1722 (Mallory, 1976, p. 103).

St. Anastasia was said to have been burned alive, tied to a stake in the ground with arms outstretched, at Sirmium in Pannonia during the persecutions of Diocletian in A.D. 304. She was venerated in Rome at an early date, and her cult became associated with a church known as titulus Anastasiae that had been built in the fourth century and named after its founder, a Christian woman called Anastasia. This early foundation, enlarged and embellished over the years, soon came to be called the church of Saint Anastasia, the Pannonian martyr.

Until the very recent identification of this drawing, Cerruti was hardly known as a draughtsman. In the Kupferstichkabinett, Berlin-Dahlem, there is an early pen drawing of hunters resting in an inn, signed and dated 1686 (KdZ 451, from the Pacetti collection; Gernsheim photograph 33879), and Cerruti’s red chalk self-portrait executed for Nicola Pio is in the Nationalmuseum, Stockholm (Clark, 1967, p. 12, no. 10).

Vittorio Casale recently attributed to Cerruti frescoes in the vault of the sacristy of S. Maria in Via Lata, Rome, and he has identified a drawing in the Ambrosiana, Milan (F 253 inf. 983), as a study for the Assumption of the Virgin that occupies the center of the ceiling (Casale, 1984, pp. 744, 753–754, note 24).

The subject is elusive; the enthroned male figure at right wearing a full wig may be a magistrate offering rewards to a man holding a helmet, who advances from the left. The empty cartouche below was no doubt intended for an explanatory motto, and the scene may have been part of a narrative cycle.
31. Scene of Abduction
VERS. Allegorical Figure of Christian Faith, Drawn over Faint Landscape

Brush and pale brown wash (recto); the figure of Faith in red chalk, the landscape in black chalk (verso). 21.3 x 17.9 cm.

PROVENANCE: Harry G. Sperling.

Bequest of Harry G. Sperling, 1971

The old attribution to Ottaviano Dandini seems plausible. Although the composition on the recto of the sheet is confused and the brushwork there rather tentative, the figure of Faith holding a chalice and a cross on the verso is very similar to a red chalk study of Joshua in the British Museum that bears the monogram O.D. and a later pen inscription, Joshua / Ottav. Dandini (1930-4-14-34). The inscription on the drawing in London is in the same hand as that on our sheet. Similar English inscriptions appear on drawings by members of the Dandini family, and they may well have come from “A Collection of 152 Clever and Interesting Original Drawings in Red Chalk, Pen and Ink, Pencil, etc., by Vincenzo, Cesare, Pietro and Ottaviano Dandini” that was with E. Parsons and Sons in London in 1931 (their cat. no. 294, Pt. 1, no. 574).

Mary Newcome identified this drawing as Giovanni David’s study, with many variations, for a lunette in the Sala del Maggior Consiglio, Palazzo Ducale, Genoa (Pittura a Genova, 1987, fig. 520; Sestieri, 1988, p. 251, repr. in color). The subject is the victory of the Genoese fleet over the Pisans in 1284 off the island of Meloria in the Ligurian Sea.

David’s fresco replaced—but differs from—a representation of this historical subject by Marcanzio Franceschini, painted for the same room in 1702–1704 and destroyed by fire in 1777. Franceschini’s treatment of the theme is known from surviving drawings and cartoons (Torti, 1962, pp. 422–428).

There is a bozzetto for David’s Battle of Meloria in the Galleria di Palazzo Reale, Genoa (Torgiano, 1989, p. 99, fig. a). The sketch is closer to the finished fresco than is our drawing.

The autograph inscription on the verso indicates that the drawing was executed at Dresden in 1717. The young artist worked there for the Saxon court from 1717 to 1720. Similar inscriptions on a drawing in the Museo Correr, Venice, and another in the Museo Civico, Udine, offer further testimony to Diziani’s stay in Dresden (Pignatti, 1981, pp. 23–24). However, no paintings from this period seem to have survived (Zugni-Tauro, 1971, p. 50).

In his long career Diziani treated this subject, with many variations, in a number of drawings and paintings. No painting can be connected with this drawing of 1717, but the composition is reflected in a picture in a private collection in Paris, a more mature work datable about 1740–1747 (Zugni-Tauro, 1971, p. 82, pl. 62). All of Diziani’s representations of the subject show the influence of Charles Le Brun’s Tente de Darius, widely known through reproductive engravings.

35. St. John Nepomucen Venerating a Crucifix

Pen and black ink, gray wash, over traces of black chalk. Framing lines in black wash. 22.7 × 16.8 cm. Lined.

Illegible inscription in pen and brown ink at lower right margin (partly cut away).

PROVENANCE: James Jackson Jarves; Cornelius Vanderbilt.

BIBLIOGRAPHY: Metropolitan Museum Handbook, 1895, p. 21, no. 293, “Carlo Cignani.—Cardinal with Crucifix.”

Gift of Cornelius Vanderbilt, 1880

The prelate is identified as John Nepomucen by one of his attributes, the seven stars held by putti hovering over his head. Erroneously attributed to Carlo Cignani in the Vanderbilt collection, the drawing was recognized as the work of Gaspare Diziani by Claus Virch in 1959.

37. Hercules and Omphale

Pen and brown ink, brown wash, over red chalk. Squared in black chalk. 29.6 × 19.7 cm. Large blue wash stain at upper right.

Inscribed in pen and brown ink on verso, Gaspare Diziani V., and with the text of a letter beginning, Caro Sig. Padre.

PROVENANCE: James Jackson Jarves; Cornelius Vanderbilt.

Gift of Cornelius Vanderbilt, 1880

Diziani represented this subject in several paintings, all of them horizontal rather than vertical in format. The picture in the Musée d’Art et d’Histoire, Geneva, is close to our drawing, although the composition is reversed (Zugni-Tauro, 1971, pp. 75–76, pl. 245).

A drawing with a similar composition, like ours vertical in format, is in the Museo Correr, Venice, where the subject is described as the Judgment of Paris. This confusion is understandable, since in the Correr drawing neither the attributes of Hercules nor those of Omphale are clearly indicated; there, a muscular male figure seated on the left is shown pointing to a group of three standing female figures (Pignatti, 1981, no. 351, repr.).

38. Design for a Ceiling:
Venice Receiving Homage

Pen and black ink, gray-green and blue-gray wash, over black chalk. 30.5 x 20.3 cm.

Inscribed in pen and dark brown ink at lower right, Gaspard Diziani Bellanese.

Provenance: "Reliable Venetian Hand" (Lugt Supp. 3055c–d); John MacGowan (Lugt 1496); [Baderou]; purchased in Paris in 1962.

Rogers Fund, 1962
62.121.2

The composition has many points in common with a ceiling fresco, the Glorification of the Widmann Family, painted by Diziani in the Palazzo Widmann, Venice, about 1755–1760 (Zugni-Tauro, 1971, pp. 95–96, pls. 232 and 233). Banners and other military paraphernalia occur in both works, as do allegorical figures of Justice, Prudence, and Fame; putti support a tray of scrolls, and Time holds an empty shield flanked by an eagle, which may be emblematic of the Carinthian origins of the family. However, in the upper part of the fresco a winged figure crowns a representative of the Widmann family, while in the drawing a figure kneels before a personification of Venice.

A pen sketch by Diziani for the lower part of our composition, with a few variations, is in the Royal Museum of Fine Arts, Copenhagen. It bears an old inscription, coregia, and is classified as the work of Fontebasso (Tu ital mag. VI, 34).

Joseph McCrindle possesses an unpublished pen and wash drawing by Diziani that comes very close to the whole Palazzo Widmann ceiling, and a study for the upper part of the composition is in the Victoria and Albert Museum, London (Ward-Jackson, 1980, no. 1001, repr.).

GASPA RE DIZIANI?

39. The Virgin Confiding the Christ Child to St. Francis of Assisi

Red chalk, brown and gray wash, over traces of black chalk, on two sheets of paper joined horizontally above center. 29.8 x 19.2 cm. Lined.

Inscribed in pen and brown ink, Gasp. Diziano Originale.; in another hand, died 1767.

Provenance: James Jackson Jarves; Cornelius Vanderbilt.
LORENZO DE FERRARI
Genoa 1680—Genoa 1744

40. Christ Driving the Money Changers from the Temple

Black chalk and graphite. 50.5 x 31.8 cm. Horizontal crease above center.

PROVENANCE: Sale, Milan, Finarte, April 26, 1986, no. 149, repr. in reverse, as Carlo Maratta; [Colnaghi]; purchased in New York in 1987.

This composition, conceived on a grand scale, is a work of Lorenzo’s maturity. Roman influence is everywhere apparent, and a number of figures derive directly from Raphael’s frescoes in the Stanze.

41. The Triumph of Justice

Brush and brown wash, over black chalk. 24.2 x 20.1 cm.

Inscribed in pen and brown ink at lower margin, abtr. Lorenzo Differari.

PROVENANCE: [Calmann]; purchased in London in 1964.

Rogers Fund, 1964 64.49.1

Ezia Gavazza identified the drawing as a study for a ceiling fresco in the Palazzo Grimaldi, Piazza San Luca, Genoa.

GASPARO DIZIANI (NO. 39)

Gift of Cornelius Vanderbilt, 1880 80.3.433

The old attribution inscribed on the sheet is plausible, if not entirely convincing. Drawings executed in point of brush are very rare in Diziani’s extensive drawn œuvre, but our sheet may be compared with certain passages in a Flight into Egypt in the Museo Correr, Venice (Pignatti, 1981, no. 391, repr.).

42. Design for a Ceiling Decoration
VERSIO. Daphne Pursued by Apollo

Pen and brown ink, over black chalk (recto); black chalk (verso). 21.8 x 31.5 cm. Small repaired losses.

Inscribed in graphite at upper left margin, LXX De-Ferrari.

PROVENANCE: Curtis O. Baer.

Gift of Curtis O. Baer, 1971 1971.50
LORENZO DE FERRARI (NO. 42)

This rococo decoration was no doubt intended to be realized in stucco and in large part gilded. The same volutes, gadrooning, and cornucopia appear in designs preserved in Waddesdon Manor and in the Uffizi; those drawings were identified on stylistic grounds as the work of Lorenzo de Ferrari by Mary Newcome (Newcome Schleier, 1989, figs. 146 and 147).

The Apollo and Daphne on the reverse of the sheet is treated as an ornamental oval medallion, which could have been executed as a painting or as a gilded stucco relief.

The Metropolitan Museum possesses a drawing of the Abduction of Cephalus by Aurora that has been plausibly attributed to Lorenzo de Ferrari. This appears on the reverse of a Glorification of the Name of Jesus by Lorenzo's father, Gregorio de Ferrari, and is catalogued and reproduced in 17th Century Italian Drawings in The Metropolitan Museum of Art, 1979, p. 133, no. 168 verso.

43. The Annunciation

Pen and brown ink, brown and gray-green wash, over traces of black chalk. Lightly squared in black chalk. 33.4 x 25.4 cm. Lined.

Inscribed in pen and black ink on a label affixed to lower margin of old mount, Pietro Melchiorre / Ferrari; in pen and brown ink on reverse of old mount, Pietro Melchiorre / Ferrari N° 20; in graphite, Dalla Collezione dei Conti / Giovanni e Giuseppe Simonetta.

PIETRO MELCHIORRE FERRARI (NO. 43)

Very few drawings by Pietro Melchiorre Ferrari have survived. The present elegant design bears an old, probably contemporary attribution to the artist. Furthermore, it is a study for an Annunciation of similar oval format now in the church of the Annunziata at Vercelli, a painting datable about 1770 (Natale, 1984, fig. 844, pp. 847 and 852). The drawing and the finished painting correspond fairly closely, although in the latter the Virgin and Gabriel are more rigidly posed and have a slightly neoclassic air.

GIOVANNI DOMENICO FERRETTI

Florence 1692—Florence 1768

44. Ceiling Decoration with Mars, Minerva, and a Dancing Satyr

Black chalk, gray wash, heightened with white, on pale rose washed paper. Framing lines in pen and black ink. 25.0 x 35.9 cm.

Inscribed in pen and brown ink at lower right, Passinelli.

PROVENANCE: [Colnaghi]; purchased in New York in 1989.

Harry G. Sperling Fund, 1989
1989.153

Jean-Luc Baroni recognized this drawing, which bears an erroneous ascription to Passinelli, as a fine and typical example of Ferretti’s graceful style. Mr. Baroni remarked that the dancing satyr on the left occurs in a ceiling fresco by Ferretti in the Villa Puccini, near Pistoia. Furthermore, the airy, spacious character of our drawing is paralleled in the frescoes at the Villa Puccini, which date from 1725 (Gregori, 1976, figs. 18–23).
Fedele Fischetti
Naples 1752–Naples 1792

45. Manius Curius Dentatus Refusing the Presents of the Samnite Ambassadors

Black, gray, and white gouache, on paper prepared with gray-brown gouache. 25.1 x 19.0 cm.

Inscribed in graphite on verso, Manio Curio Dentato; in another hand, Fischetti; in pen and brown ink over graphite in another hand, Disegno Originale di / D. Fedele Fischetti Pittore / di Corio di Ferdinando / quarto / Nativo di martino del regno / di Napoli.

PROVENANCE: James Jackson Jarves; Cornelius Vanderbilt.

BIBLIOGRAPHY: Metropolitan Museum Handbook, 1895, p. 23, no. 323, "Fedele Fischetti (?).—Historical Scene."

Gift of Cornelius Vanderbilt, 1880
80.3.323

The old attribution to Fischetti is entirely plausible, and the inscription on the verso correctly describes the subject. The incorruptible Manius Curius Dentatus refuses the rich offerings of the Samnites, who visit him as he prepares his frugal repast of boiled vegetables.

The physical types and the treatment of drapery are similar to those in Fischetti's frescoes representing scenes from the life of Alexander the Great, now in the Museo di Capodimonte, Naples (Bolaffi, v, p. 15, fig. 15).

46. Design for a Ceiling: Jason and the Golden Fleece

Pen and gray ink, gray wash, on pale beige paper. Framing lines in pen and black ink. 45.1 x 33.7 cm. overall; the drawing, excluding the border, measures 36.1 x 30.9 cm.

Inscribed in pen and gray ink at left margin with a scale of measurement that includes numbers from i to 24.

Rogers Fund, 1971
1971.36

The apotheosis of Jason occupies the central field of the ceiling and is surrounded by four incidents from the legend of the Golden Fleece. Clockwise from the left the subjects are: Jason appearing before his uncle, the usurper Pelias; Medea giving Jason the magic potions; Jason slaying the dragon that guards the Golden Fleece; and the triumphal return of Jason.
FEDELE FISCHETTI (NO. 46)

When in the Kaufman collection, the drawing bore a tentative attribution to Aegidius Schor, but it is clearly the work of Fedele Fischetti. It may be usefully compared with a design in the Janos Scholz Collection at The Pierpont Morgan Library that is a study for a ceiling decoration by Fischetti in the Palazzo Reale, Caserta (Bean and Stampfle, 1971, no. 288, repr.).

FRANCESCO FONTEBASSO

Venice 1707—Venice 1769

47. Two Standing Male Figures and Seated Woman with a Child

Pen and brown ink, brown and gray wash, over black chalk. Vertical ruled stylus lines at left and right. 37.6 x 26.2 cm.

Numbered in pen and brown ink at upper right, 41.

PROVENANCE: [Meystard]; Henry Scipio Reitlinger (Lugt Supp. 2274a); [Kleinberger]; purchased in New York in 1961.

Rogers Fund, 1961
61.56.2

This drawing comes from a now-dismembered album of figure studies, the pages of which bear vertical lines traced with a stylus, probably indicating that it was originally intended as a ledger. The album had been broken up by 1920, and pages from it, bearing numbers up to fifty-five, are widely dispersed. In addition to our drawing, ten further sheets are in public collections: four in the Art Museum at Princeton University (Gibbons, 1977, nos. 211–214, repr.); three in the British Museum (1920–9–29–1, 1920–9–29–2, 1920–9–29–3); one in the Robert Lehman Collection, The Metropolitan Museum of Art (George Knox in Lehman Collection, vi, 1987, no. 60, repr., as Pietro Antonio Novelli); one in the Gabinetto Disegni e Stampe degli Uffizi (Florence, 1985, no. 80, fig. 78); and one in the Achenbach Foundation for Graphic Arts, The Fine Arts Museums of San Francisco (Johnson and Goldyne, 1985, no. 10, repr. in color).

These sheets were convincingly attributed to Fontebasso by James Byam Shaw before 1954, the date of his masterful study of Fontebasso’s draughtsmanship, and Byam Shaw maintains this attribution today, despite halfhearted attempts by others to assign them to Pietro Antonio Novelli or the Bolognese artist Ercole Graziani.

ANTONIO FRANCHI

This drawing and No. 49 below were independently associated by Marco Chiarini and Lawrence Turčič with frescoed pendentives by Antonio Franchi in the second chapel on the left in S. Frediano in Cestello, Florence. Franchi’s decorations in this chapel, which is dedicated to St. John the Baptist, are signed and dated 1706 (Paatz, XI, 1941, pp. 152–153). The putto and angel in this drawing appear in the pendentive on the right above the altar.

49. Angel Holding a Banderole

Joshua is seen in steep perspective, with drawn sword in his hand. The sun that he commanded to stand still to ensure Israel’s victory over the Amorites is reflected on his shield (Joshua 10:12). The drawing is a study for the figure of Joshua that appears in Gaetano Gandolfi’s fresco in the cupola above the high altar of S. Maria della Vita, Bologna, painted in 1779. The fresco represents the Virgin in glory surrounded by heroic figures of the Old Dispensation.

Chalk studies for some of the other figures in this fresco have survived. Like the present drawing and No. 53 below, they formed part of an album sold in Edinburgh in 1957. A study for the Virgin in glory is in the Rhode Island School of Design (Providence, 1983, no. 23, repr.); drawings for Noah and for an angel with a palm branch are in The Pierpont Morgan Library (Bean and Stampfle, 1971, no. 289, repr.; Ottawa, 1982, no. 110, repr., respectively); a drawing of two angels is in the Ashmolean Museum, Oxford (Macandrew, 1980, no. 1001A; Gernsheim photograph 48271); and a study of King David is now in the collection of Joseph McCrindle (Exhibition of Old Master Drawings. P. and D. Colnaghi and Co., London, 1966, no. 82) Two further studies were with Colnaghi in 1957, but their present whereabouts are unknown: one represents Judith and Queen Esther, the other the head of Joshua and a priest holding a thurible.

A pen and wash composition study including Joshua and the seated prophet in No. 53 is in the Schloss Fachsenfeld Collection (Stuttgart, 1978, no. 61, repr.). An oil sketch for the same section of the cupola was once in a German private collection (Roli, 1977, fig.
76a), while a bozzetto for the opposite half, with a representation of the Sacrifice of Manoah, is now in The Snite Museum of Art, Notre Dame, Indiana (Selected Works, 1987, p. 131, repr. in color).

53. Seated Prophet

Black chalk, stumped, gray wash, heightened with white, on beige paper. 42.2 x 31.2 cm. Scattered stains and losses; horizontal creases. Lined.

54. St. Margaret of Cortona, St. James of the March, and St. Didacus

Pen and brown ink, brown wash, over black chalk. 29.5 x 18.7 cm. Lined.

PROVENANCE: James Jackson Jarves; Cornelius Vanderbilt.

The crippled figure in the foreground and his attendant invoke the intercession of the three Franciscan saints.

Although the drawing entered the collection with an attribution to Zurbarán, it has for some time been recognized as a typical work by Gaetano Gandolfi. In 1987 Lawrence Turčić identified the sheet as a study for a painting signed and dated 1775 by Gaetano, now in S. Giorgio, Porto San Giorgio, on the Adriatic, near Fermo (Dania, 1967, pp. 20–21, fig. 125).

Mimi Cazort has published a sheet in the Fondazione Giorgio Cini, Venice, with composition studies for the same painting (Gandolfi, 1987, p. 44, no. 18, repr.).

55. A Dying Religious Supported by an Angel

Pen and brown ink, gray wash, over traces of black chalk. 19.9 x 14.6 cm. Lower half of left margin made up.

Mimi Cazort recognized this drawing, previously given to Ubaldo Gandolfi, as a study for a small painting—perhaps a bozzetto—by his brother Gaetano, which is now in the Pinacoteca Vaticana (Rolli, 1977, fig. 272a). The subject has yet to be satisfactorily identified. The author of the first catalogue of the Pinacoteca Vaticana (1934) prudently described the scene as "La morte di un religioso." However, other authors have titled the picture "The Death of St. Andrew Avellino." Andrew Avellino was a Theatine who died in his eighty-eighth year from a fit of apoplexy as he was beginning to celebrate Mass. In the painting and in the preparatory studies the swooning or dying figure, seated at a refectory table, is a relatively young man who is wearing what appears to be a Servite or Benedictine habit.
GAETANO GANDOLFI (NO. 55)

Further drawings related to this composition are in the Museo del Prado, Madrid (Inv. F.D. 1304; Pérez Sánchez, 1978, no. 62, repr.), in the Pinacoteca Nazionale, Bologna (Inv. 3714; Gaeta Bertela, 1976, no. 115, repr.), and in a private collection (Gernsheim photograph 115735).

Anna Ottani Cavina kindly pointed out in 1987 that in a private collection there is a painting of this subject by Gaetano, measuring 98 by 154 centimeters, that corresponds very closely to our drawing. Another painted version of the subject, quite differently composed, with Apelles seated to the right before his canvas and Campaspe and Alexander standing left of center, signed and dated 1793, is in a private collection in Bologna (Bianchi, 1936, p. 159, no. 96, pl. XLVIII).

58. The Royal Family of Troy Mourning the Death of Hector

Black chalk. 20.7 x 28.9 cm. Scattered stains; surface considerably abraded. Lined.

Inscribed in black chalk above female figure at left margin, presumably in the artist's hand, cassandra.

PROVENANCE: James Jackson Jarves; Cornelius Vanderbilt.

GAETANO GANDOLFI (NO. 58)

Gift of Cornelius Vanderbilt, 1880

The figure of Cassandra on the left is identified by an autograph inscription. Andromache is seated and Priam stands by the bier on which rests the cruelly mutilated body of Hector. A larger, more highly finished black chalk drawing of the same composition was on the London art market in 1962, described as the “Death of Germanicus” (Exhibition of Old Master Drawings, P. and D. Colnaghi and Co., London, 1962, no. 19). This drawing, the subject correctly identified, is now in the collection of Margaret and Ian Ross, Toronto (David McTavish in Toronto, 1981, no. 147, repr.).

59. Marcus Curtius Leaping into the Chasm

A much larger and more highly finished drawing by Gaetano of the same composition is in The Cleveland Museum of Art (Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Prasse Collection, 70.288; repr. Cleveland Museum Bulletin, February 1971, p. 39, no. 77).

60. The Dutch Microscopist Anton van Leeuwenhoek

Pen and black and brown ink, brown and gray wash. Framing lines in black ink. 20.3 x 14.1 cm.

Inscribed in pen and brown ink in cartouche, Antonius Leeuwenhoekius.

Provenance: [Colnaghi], purchased in New York in 1987.

no. 35, repr. as Mauro Gandolfi; Annual Report, 1987–1988, p. 23, as Mauro Gandolfi.

Purchase, Mrs. Carl L. Selden Gift, in memory of Carl L. Selden, 1987

This posthumous representation of Anton van Leeuwenhoek (1632–1723) is a free interpretation of Jan Verkolje’s painted portrait of 1686, which enjoyed a wide circulation through reproductive prints. Verkolje’s painting is now in Amsterdam (Rijksmuseum, 1976, p. 571, no. A597, repr.).

The decorative framing is of Gaetano’s own invention. Winged female figures with fish tails flank the cartouche, while a mite and a flea, both subjects of Leeuwenhoek’s pioneering investigations, hover to the left and right above the beribboned frame.

The drawing was exhibited by Jean-Luc Baroni in New York in 1987 with three other portrait busts in decorative frames. These represented the French botanist Joseph Pitton de Tournefort (1656–1708), the Neapolitan physicist Giambattista della Porta (1535–1615), and the Bolognese physician Giovan Battista Capponi (1620–1675). In Mr. Baroni’s catalogue all four drawings were attributed to Mauro Gandolfi. However, in a letter of November 17, 1989, Mimi Cazort kindly informs us that these drawings are the work of Mauro’s father, Gaetano, and are probably part of a series of portraits of botanici famosi mentioned in Gaetano’s manuscript autobiography.

the sleeping putto, and the putto holding aloft a lamp are also appropriate attributes.

The draughtsmanship appears to be that of Mauro Gandolfi at his most elegant; this representation of Astronomy may be compared with a similar figure painted by the artist on one of the three coaches decorated by him that are now preserved at the Musée national du château de Compriègne (Rosenberg and Sébastiani, 1977, pp. 240–241).

UBALDO GANDOLFI (NO. 63)

The drawing was recognized by Mimi Cazort as a study by Ubaldo that corresponds very closely to his painting of the same subject, dated 1766, in S. Mamante at Medicina, near Bologna. Lawrence Turčić later found in the Kunsthalle Heilshof at Worms, under an attribution to Giacomo Cavedone, another study by Ubaldo for the painting with considerable differences in the attitudes and distribution of the figures (Master Drawings, XXIII–XXIV, 2, 1985–1986, p. 208, pl. 15, with incorrect caption).

64. Decapitation of St. James the Greater

Pen and brown ink, brown wash, over slight traces of black chalk. 29.3 x 18.1 cm. Top cut to a shouldered arch. Scattered stains and losses. Lined.

PROVENANCE: James Jackson Jarees; Cornelius Vanderbilt.

Gift of Cornelius Vanderbilt, 1880 80.3.497

In 1976 Mimi Cazort identified this drawing, which had been attributed to Gaetano Gandolfi, as Ubaldo's study for a composition known to her only through an old photograph. To judge from a reproduction, that painting may be a bozzetto for an altarpiece representing the Martyrdom of St. James the Greater in S. Giacomo Maggiore at Villa Cade, just outside Reggio nell'Emilia (Modena, 1986, p. 95, repr. in color, p. 324, no. 261, repr.).

The trimmed inscription at the lower right margin is in the same red chalk as the drawing itself and may be a signature. The pen inscription giving the drawing to Ubaldo Gandolfi is in Alessandro Maggiori’s hand; he purchased the drawing in Bologna in 1788, seven years after the artist’s death. In 1791 Maggiori purchased in Bologna another academy by Ubaldo, a red chalk drawing of a seated male nude; this was sold in New York by Sotheby’s on January 13, 1989 (no. 279, repr.).

This and the following three caricatures (Nos. 69, 70, 71) came from three albums of portrait drawings by Pier Leone Ghezzi that appeared on the market in the early 1970s. Albums 1.1 and 1.2, which contained eighty-nine full-page caricatures, were dismembered at that time and the drawings scattered in collections here and abroad. Volume II, which presently contains forty-seven full-page portraits and sixty-four caricatured portrait busts mounted four to a page, is now in The Pierpoint Morgan Library (Nineteenth Report to the Fellows . . . 1978–1980, 1981, p. 104). Six full-page caricatures and eighty portrait busts had been removed from the volume in the Morgan Library before 1972. The binding of Volume 1.1, with a title page followed by an eulogy of Ghezzi, is preserved at the Metropolitan Museum. The title reads, DISEGNI ORIGINALI / RAPPRESENTANTI / ALCUNI RITRATTI IN CARICATURA / FATTI DAL CAVALIERE / PIER LEONE GHEZZI / PITTORE ROMANO / TOMO I. / ROMA MDCCCLXX. Volume II has the same title but is designated TOMO II. The bindings with their marbled boards are Italian, and they are lettered on the spine, DISEGNI / ORIGINALI / DI P.L.: GHEZZI. The date 1780 on the title pages indicates that these albums were assembled twenty-five years after the artist’s death.

Ghezzi was enormously prolific as a caricaturist. Many such drawings were given or sold by him during his lifetime, but when he died, his widow inherited a number of large albums of portraits. Natoire, director of the French Academy in Rome, wrote to the marquis de Marigny in 1755 that Ghezzi’s widow was unwilling to break up the albums and was asking two sequins for each caricature. The volume with the least number of pages contained ninety-five caricatures, for which Signora Ghezzi’s price was thus 190 sequins, and Marigny turned it down as too expensive (Montaignon, xi, 1901, pp. 91 and 95).

The albums from which our caricatures were removed were made up in 1780, some eighteen years after the death of Ghezzi’s widow, perhaps by an antiquarian bookseller. The drawings in the volume bear dates that range from 1749 to 1754, the year before Ghezzi’s death. There is no apparent order in the sequence of portraits; they represent secular and religious clergy, Roman aristocrats and their servants, musicians, painters, sculptors, foreign visitors to Rome, and members of the papal court.

It has been suggested that these albums belonged to Charles VII, King of Naples, who took them to Spain when he succeeded to the throne of that country in 1759 as Charles III (see Byam Shaw, 1983, i, pp. 186–187). But the albums—assembled in Rome in 1780—bear no traces of such royal ownership.

Ghezzi’s long inscription at the lower margin of this sympathetic caricature refers to the architect Luigi Vanvitelli’s designs for the gilded stucco decoration of the half-domes of the two transepts and of the tribune of St. Peter’s. These decorations were commissioned in 1749 by Benedict XIV in preparation for the Holy Year of 1750.

It is interesting that the caricature that immediately preceded the present drawing in the album from which they were both removed represents the sculptor Giovanni Battista Maini, who modeled the nine stucco medallions representing scenes from the lives of the Apostles Peter and Paul—after Raphael, Guido Reni, and Alessandro Algardi—that ornament the three half-domes decorated by Vanvitelli. This caricature of Maini is now in the Minneapolis Institute of Arts (Clark, 1974, pp. 64–67, fig. 2).

Somewhat earlier caricatures by Ghezzi of Maini (dated 1742) and Vanvitelli (dated 1744) are in the Biblioteca Apostolica Vaticana (Ottob. lat. 3118, fols. 139 and 144; repr. Pinto, 1986, p. 184, and Vanvitelli, 1975, p. 56, respectively).

Pen and brown ink, over traces of black chalk. 30.4 x 21.0 cm. Lined.

The figures are numbered from 1 to 4, following the order of the title at the lower margin. Another set of numbers, arranged differently, has been partially effaced. The mount is inscribed in pen and brown ink at the lower margin, (1) Monisier de Vändier Direttore delle Fabbriche del Re di / Francia (2) L'Abbé Bianco (3) Monsieur Soufflo (4) Mons.model Cochin; numbered in pen and brown ink in upper right corner of the old mount, 20.

This caricature records the presence in Rome in 1750 of Abel-François Poisson (1727–1781), younger brother of the marquis de Pompadour. Poisson was then marquis de Vандières; the title marquis de Marigny was granted later. At this time, Poisson possessed the survivance of Lenormant de Tournheim, directeur général des Bâtiments Royaux, who dispatched the young man on a thorough tour of all the principal artistic centers of Italy. His learned guides were the critic Le Blanc, the architect Soufflot, and the artist Cochin. Individual caricatured portrait busts of all four of these visitors, three of them dated April 25, 1750, are preserved in the Istituto Nazionale per la Grafica, Rome (repr. Soufflot et son temps, 1980, p. 46).

An old and fairly exact copy of our drawing is in the Cabinet des Dessins of the Musée du Louvre (Inv. 3277).

70. Abbé Jean-Antoine Nollet

Pen and brown ink, over traces of black chalk. 30.2 x 21.6 cm. Lined.

Inscribed in pen and brown ink at lower margin on the old mount, Sig. Abbate Nollet celebre Fisico experimentale; numbered in pen and brown ink in upper right corner of the old mount, 34.

Purchase, David L. Klein, Jr. Memorial Foundation, Inc. Gift, 1972 1972.82

The abbé Nollet (1700–1770) was a French experimental physicist of European reputation. Ghezzi would have drawn this caricature in Rome in 1749 in the course of Nollet’s second visit to Italy.

71. Joseph Henry

Pen and brown ink, over traces of black chalk. 31.2 x 21.3 cm. Lined.

Inscribed in pen and brown ink in the artist’s hand at the lower margin, S' Giuseppe Hennri Ingleso huomo assai erudito nelle Antichità e in Letteratura huomo assai...; in another hand at lower margin on the old mount, Cavaliere Ingleso dilettante delle Antichità; numbered in pen and brown ink in upper right corner of the old mount, 32.

Rogers Fund, 1973 1973.67

Anthony M. Clark identified the figure as Joseph Henry, of Straffan, County Kildare, the son of a Dublin banker. He traveled to Rome around 1750 with his uncle Joseph Leeson, 1st Earl of Milltown, and his cousin Joseph, Jr., later the second earl. A caricature by Ghezzi in the Anthony Morris Clark Bequest at the Philadelphia Museum of Art shows Henry taking tea with three other English gentlemen on the Grand Tour (Philadelphia, 1980, no. 13, repr.). Two portrait busts of Henry, both dated 1750, are in the Istituto Nazionale per la Grafica, Rome (F.N. 4738 and F.N. 4739).

Pompeo Batoni painted a half-length portrait of Henry that is now in the Walters Art Gallery, Baltimore (Clark and Bowron, 1985, no. 147, pl. 137).

72. Angels Supporting a Frame

Once attributed to Giulio Romano, this drawing was recognized in 1959 as the work of Pier Leone Ghezzi by Anthony Blunt, who pointed out that the Chiesa di Marchegian mentioned in the autograph inscription is S. Salvatore in Lauro, from 1669 the “national” church of citizens from Ascoli Piceno in Rome. The Ghezzi family came from that Marchigian city, and they owned a chapel—the second on the left—in S. Salvatore in Lauro. Pier Leone painted an altarpiece, signed and dated 1731, that is still in place in the Ghezzi chapel (Lo Bianco, 1985, no. 61, repr.). The painting represents Joseph, Anne, and Joachim looking upward in veneration. Their gaze was presumably directed toward a votive image of the Virgin held by angels in the lunette above the altarpiece. The framing of this image is the subject of our drawing. Whether this lunette decoration was executed is uncertain; today the lunette contains a simple rectangular panel with the sacred monogram, IHS.

The model may be Campaspe and the artist Apelles, although the figure of Alexander is absent. This tale was the subject of several drawings by Giani; in one of these, now in the Civiche Raccolte d’Arte, Castello Sforzesco, Milan, the artist’s canvas or panel rests against a statue of a standing male figure with an Egyptian headdress, as it does here (Gernsheim photograph 100623).

The broad, rather coarse pen work, the heavy drapery, and the treatment of hands and heads in profile are paralleled in a drawing of Charity by Giani in the Minneapolis Institute of Arts (Neilson, 1972, no. 80, repr.).

CORRADO GIAQUINTO
Molfetta 1703—Naples 1766

74. St. Joseph Presented by the Virgin to the Holy Trinity

Red chalk, pen and brown ink, brown wash, heightened with white. 26.2 x 40.2 cm.

Inscribed in pen and brown ink at lower right, Corrado Giaquinto; on verso, in pen and brown ink, fatto per Il Re di Sardigna di palmi / 43-28—

PROVENANCE: [Colnaghi]; purchased in London in 1965.

In 1965 Anthony M. Clark identified this drawing as a study for Giaquinto's fresco, probably executed in 1735, in the vault of a chapel dedicated to St. Joseph in S. Teresa, Turin (Orsi, 1958, fig. 33). The chapel, designed by Filippo Juvarra, was commissioned by Carlo Emanuele III, the Re di Sardegna mentioned in the inscription on the verso. Giaquinto also supplied lateral canvases for the chapel, a Rest on the Flight into Egypt and the Death of St. Joseph (Orsi, 1958, figs. 34 and 35).

Thirteen further drawings by Giaquinto that may be associated with the vault fresco of St. Joseph in glory are preserved in the Museo Nazionale di San Martino, Naples (Videtta, 1962, pp. 16–19). Some of these come closer than our drawing to the fresco as executed, where both Christ and God the Father are seated on a cloud bank and the Virgin appears to the left, standing behind St. Joseph.

The hand writing on the wall has made a slight error in spelling. According to the Clementine edition of the Vulgate in use in Gionima’s time, the mysterious words should be MANE THECEL (not THETEL) PHARES.
ANTONIO GIONIMA (NO. 75)

The attribution to Gionima was made by Philip Pouncey in 1958. The two servants in the right foreground appear in reverse and to the left in a similarly elaborate drawn composition in the Pinacoteca di Brera, Milan, which represents not the Feast of Belshazzar but the Banquet of Anthony and Cleopatra (Inv. no. 225; Roli and Sestieri, 1981, no. 85, repr.).

In 1982 Lawrence Turčić recognized the drawing as the work of Gionima, and his attribution has met with agreement. The drawing is comparable in style with many published examples of the artist’s work, to which might be added an unpublished red chalk study of the Holy Family in Joseph’s workshop that has on the reverse a letter signed and dated by Gionima in 1731 (Museum of Art, Rhode Island School of Design, Providence, 58.157).

In this sacra conversazione the Virgin and Child are attended by St. Joseph, St. Joachim, St. Anne, and the infant Baptist with his mother, St. Elizabeth, while a standing male figure holding a book points to the Virgin from the right foreground.

The very plausible attribution to Gionima was proposed by Lawrence Turčić in 1982.

The convincing attribution to Nicola Grassi was suggested by James Byam Shaw in 1969. The position of the Virgin and the poses as well as the facial types of the saints below are closely paralleled in a signed altarpiece by Grassi, the Virgin Appearing to St. Oswald of Northumbria, St. Anthony of Padua, and St. Florian, in the parish church at Sutrio, near Tolmezzo (Rizzi, 1982, no. 19, rep.). The draughtsmanship is close to that of certain sheets attributed to Nicola Grassi in the "Reliable Venetian Hand," for example a red chalk study of a young woman holding a lamb in the British Museum (1943-11-13-7; Bettagno, 1966, no. 66, rep.).

In a letter of June 30, 1980, Mimi Cazort proposed the attribution of this drawing to Ercole Graziani, the younger. She suggested comparison with two similar chalk drawings traditionally attributed to the artist in the Schloss Fachsenfeld Collection at Stuttgart, The Adoration of the Shepherds and Christ Falling under the Cross (Thiem, 1982, nos. 63 and 64, repr.).

The old inscription on the reverse, Donato Creti, is not irrelevant, since Graziani owed much to the example of this artist, who was his master.

Harry G. Sperling Fund, 1985 1985.158.1

The old attribution to Jacopo Guarana of this drawing and No. 82 below seems quite plausible, for the figure types of both the satyrs and the putti resemble those in Guarana’s frescoes in the Villa Pisani at Stra (see Affreschi nelle ville venete, 1978, 11, figs. 824–829 and 903). The draftmanship is here freer and more competent than in a red chalk study of a satyress in the Hermitage (Grigorieva and Kantor-Gukowskja, no. 67, repr.). The Leningrad drawing bears an old attribution to Guarana Padre and has been associated with Jacopo Guarana’s decorations at Stra.

The drawing may be a design for a small devotional picture in which the Virgin with the Christ Child, each holding a small scapular, appear in glory surrounded by angels and putti. The mountainous landscape lightly indicated below is dominated by a tower, which is often a symbol of chastity.
The identification of this sketch as an early work by

The principal architectural features of the staircase and the arcaded courtyard have been fairly accurately recorded by the draughtsman, but Jacopo Sansovino’s giant nude statues of Mars and Neptune at the top of the stairs have been transformed into twisting, draped figures.

This is one of Francesco’s most brilliant records of a contemporary Venetian event, very probably drawn on the spot by the aging artist in the quarter of S. Marcuola, where a fire broke out in late November 1789. Another version of this subject with important variations is in the Museo Correr, Venice. The figures in the Correr sheet are in Francesco’s hand, while the buildings in the background, drawn in a rather dry and awkward fashion, seem to have been added by the artist’s son Giacomo. On the Correr drawing are inscriptions by Giacomo, Incendio di S. Marcuola L’anno 1789 28 Novembre and Guardi F. (Kultzen, 1968, repr. p. 15; Morassi, 1975, no. 313, fig. 313).

The recto of our drawing served as the model for two paintings by Francesco: one in the Gallerie dell’Accademia, Venice (Kultzen, 1968, repr. p. 16; Morassi, 1973, 1, no. 312, 11, fig. 337), and the other now in the Alte Pinakothek, Munich (Kultzen, 1968, repr. in color p. 13; Morassi, 1973, 1, no. 313, 11, fig. 338).

The Roman ruins on the verso of this sheet were utilized by Francesco for the left half of a painted architectural capriccio now in the collection of the Duke of Alba, another version of which was formerly on the art market in Berlin (Morassi, 1973, 1, nos. 719 and 720, 11, figs. 677 and 678, respectively). A detail of the Roman arch in our drawing appears on the verso of a pen sketch for a lagoon capriccio by Francesco in the Princes Gate Collection, Courtauld Institute of Art, London (Princes Gate, 1959, text vol., p. 103, no. 141, fig. 39).

91. The Island of Anconetta

Pen and brown ink, brown and gray wash, over red chalk. At upper margin of verso appear two feet wearing pointed shoes, pricked for transfer and executed in brown, blue, and yellow wash. 11.6 x 28.8 cm.

Inscribed in pen and brown ink on verso, Le figura un poco più grande di questa.

PROVENANCE: Marquis de Biron; purchased in Geneva in 1937.

Francesco Guardi utilized this view in three paintings of the lagoon island of Anconetta, also known as the
FRANCESCO GUARDI (NO. 91)

Madonnaetta. Additional figures and gondolas were added to the paintings: one in the Fogg Art Museum, Cambridge, Mass.; the second in the Galleria dell’Accademia, Venice (Morassi, 1973, i, nos. 659 and 660, ii, figs. 618 and 619, respectively); and the third in the Fitzwilliam Museum, Cambridge (Goodison and Robertson, 1967, p. 72, no. 184, pl. 32).

The feet with pointed shoes and the inscription on the verso are ascribed to Giacomo by Byam Shaw. Thus, Francesco executed his drawing on a portion of a larger sheet already used by his son.

This view of the Teatro La Fenice is one of Guardi’s last drawings. The Fenice, the work of the architect Giovanni Antonio Silva, was begun in 1790 and opened in April 1792, less than a year before Francesco’s death. The drawing is well preserved, although James Byam Shaw has suggested that the accents of gray wash, used to strengthen the shadows in the foreground and on the theater and adjacent buildings, may have been added by Giacomo Guardi. In any case the son is entirely responsible for the drawing of architecture on the reverse of the sheet.

A freer view of the Fenice seen from a different angle is in the Museo Correr, Venice ( Pallucchini, 1943, fig. 87; Morassi, 1975, no. 404, fig. 406; Pignatti, 1983, no. 662, repr.). A further drawing by Francesco of the theater seen from yet another angle was sold in New York in 1980 (Sotheby Parke Bernet, January 9, 1980, no. 74, repr.; Morassi, 1975, no. 406, fig. 409). It is interesting to note that on the reverse of this third drawing of the Fenice by Francesco there is an architectural design in the hand of Giacomo Guardi.

This large and exceptionally luminous view of a villa in the Veneto was used by Francesco Guardi in a painting of approximately the same dimensions, now in a private collection (Morassi, 1973, i, no. 681, ii, figs. 636–638). Figures have been added in the painting; they stand in front of the villa and on the road in the foreground.

A fairly exact copy after this painting, drawn by Francesco himself or by his son Giacomo, is in the Ashmolean Museum, Oxford. This copy bears an inscription that identifies the now-destroyed villa: View of the Seat of S.E. Loredano at Passo near Treviso at present in the possession of John Strange Esq. N.B. grass ground within the Fence, without the post road from Treviso to Bassan (Parker, 1958, no. 1015, pl. CCXIX; Morassi, 1975, no. 423, fig. 425). John Strange, a patron of the artist, was British Resident in Venice from 1773 to 1790.

Francesco made several drawings at the Villa Loredan. A smaller sketch of the entrance gate and façade is in the Rhode Island School of Design, Providence (Morassi, 1975, no. 421, fig. 421; Laura Giles in Providence, 1983, no. 21, repr.). A view from the front windows of the villa is in the Fodor Museum, Amsterdam (Morassi, 1975, no. 425, fig. 427), and a view from the back windows is in the Ashmolean Museum (Parker, 1958, no. 1016; Morassi, 1975, no. 424, fig. 426).

The painted view of the villa corresponding to our drawing is one of a series of four pictures formerly in
FRANCESCO GUARDI (NO. 93)

Lord Rothermere’s collection. The others represent the garden façade of the Villa Loredan (Everett Fahy in Wrightsman Collection. v, 1973, pp. 106–112, no. 12, repr. in color; Morassi, 1973, i, no. 682, 11, figs. 640 and 642), the façade and garden of the neighboring “Villa dal Timpano Arcuato,” and the gardens of the Palazzo Contarini dal Zaffo in Venice (Morassi, 1973, i, nos. 683 and 680, 11, figs. 659 and 655, respectively).

Byam Shaw has suggested that our drawing probably dates from 1778, when the painter undertook a journey from Venice to a family property in the Val di Sole.

James Byam Shaw said of this drawing that, if rather scratchy in the pen work and not of the highest quality, it must certainly be by Francesco, though the inscription, Guardi f., below the margin line is in Giacomo’s hand. Another drawing of these gardens, with hedges clipped into architectural forms, taken from a different point of view, is in the Museo Correr, Venice (Morassi, 1975, no. 432, fig. 438; Pignatti, 1983, no. 644, repr.).

The delicate chalk sketch of St. Teresa on the left half of the verso is unrelated in style—and perhaps even in date—to the landscape on the recto.

The drawing may record the bullbaiting that took place in the Piazza S. Marco in 1782, on the occasion of the visit to Venice of the Russian archduke Paul Pavlovitch and his archduchess Maria Feodorovna, the “Conti del Nord.” Two further sketches by Francesco of bullbaiting are preserved in the Princes Gate Collection, Courtauld Institute Galleries, London (Princes Gate, 1959, nos. 139 and 140, pls. XCIX, C; Morassi, 1975, nos. 268 and 270, figs. 270 and 272, respectively).

On the Feast of the Ascension, the Doge was rowed in his state barge, the Bucintoro, to S. Nicolò di Lido to perform the traditional ceremony of Wedding the Adriatic by throwing a ring into the sea. The Bucintoro Guardi sketched here was the last of its kind; launched in 1729, it was destroyed by the French for its gold decoration after the fall of the Venetian Republic in 1797.

Benesch suggested that the colored washes on the recto are not "original," but Byam Shaw rightly insists that these watercolor accents are entirely characteristic of Francesco.

This capriccio differs from the preceding two examples in that the great courtyard lacks a monumental staircase. In this respect and also in the presence of the ornamental vase on a pedestal in the left foreground, the drawing is related to a painting by Francesco in the National Gallery, Prague (Morassi, 1973, 1, no. 792, 11, fig. 721).

The graphite sketch on the verso, too faint to be reproduced, is presumably by Francesco, who has copied an oval painting of St. Aloysius Gonzaga by Domenico Tiepolo, one version of which is in the Pinacoteca di Brera, Milan (Mariuz, 1971, p. 126, pl. 178).

The designs on the reverse of the sheet have never before been mentioned or reproduced. They are no doubt projects for ceiling or overdoor decorations, probably intended to be executed in stucco or painted in imitation thereof.

Francesco Guardi based this composition on a painted architectural capriccio by Canaletto now in the Gallerie dell’Accademia, Venice (Constable, 1976, 1, pl. 93, 11, no. 509). The painting had been presented by Canaletto to the Venetian Academy on his election in September 1763.
FRANCESCO GUARDI (NO. 110)

A smaller and sketchier drawing by Francesco after the same painting by Canaletto is in the Janos Scholz Collection at The Pierpont Morgan Library (Morassi, 1975, no. 561, fig. 554).

111. Architectural Capriccio: Garden Entrance to a Palace
VERS. Three Masked and Costumed Figures and Other Figure Studies

Pen and brown ink, brown wash, over black chalk. Framing lines in pen and brown ink (recto); pen and light brown ink for costumed figures; dark brown ink for the other figures (verso). 18.3 x 11.5 cm.

PROVENANCE: Marquis de Biron; purchased in Geneva in 1937.

The very free, rather erratic pen work of this sketch makes it a particularly lively example of Francesco’s capriccios; Morassi’s reservations about its authenticity are unjustified. The crude figure studies on the reverse of the sheet are given to Giacomo Guardi by James Byam Shaw.
112. Lagoon Capriccio with an Obelisk

Three further versions of this drawing have survived, all with slight variations. One is in the Kupferstichkabinett, Berlin-Dahlem (Parker and Byam Shaw, 1962, no. 81, repr.; Morassi, 1975, no. 625, fig. 602), the second is in the Kramarsky collection (Byam Shaw, 1951, p. 77, no. 69, repr.; Morassi, 1975, no. 626), while a third was once in the George Blumenthal collection (sale, London, Sotheby’s, November 26, 1970, no. 69, repr.; Morassi, 1975, no. 628, fig. 603).

The present example was already rather faded at the time of its acquisition in 1907, when Roger Fry commented that “the force of tone has been somewhat obliterated by age.”

This capriccio subject seems to have been popular with Guardi’s clientele, for as many as six paintings of it are recorded by Morassi (1973, I, nos. 911–916).

113. Lagoon Capriccio with a Tower

Light, foliate scroll motifs arranged in curves and counter-curves compose the left half of a rectangular frame that was probably intended for overhead ornamentation. This large and graceful design testifies to Francesco's very considerable gifts as a decorator.

Venice

Pen and brown ink, gray wash. Framing lines in pen and brown ink. 18.0 x 21.9 cm. Lower margin irregular.

PROVENANCE: Mrs. Gutekunst, London; Harry G. Sperling.

Bequest of Harry G. Sperling, 1971
1975.151.32

Like the six drawings that follow, this is a good, signed example of Giacomo Guardi’s rather pedestrian style as a draughtsman of Venetian views. The island and church of S. Giorgio Maggiore were often represented by Francesco and his son Giacomo. There are two larger drawings of this subject by Giacomo in the Museo Correr, Venice (Pignatti, 1983, nos. 794, 812, repr.), another large version is in the Museo d’Arte Antica, Castello Sforzesco, Milan (Prercerutti-Garberi, 1969–2, no. 34, repr.), and one that is smaller than the present sheet is in the Robert Lehman Collection, The Metropolitan Museum of Art (James Byam Shaw in Lehman Collection, VI, 1987, no. 53, repr.).

A pen and wash drawing of the same view, with a different grouping of gondolas, is in the Robert Lehman Collection, The Metropolitan Museum of Art (James Byam Shaw in Lehman Collection. vi, 1987, no. 45, repr.). A larger gouache drawing of the view is in the Museo Correr, Venice (Pignatti, 1983, no. 880, repr.), and a small oil painting on canvas, also by Giacomo, is in the Fitzwilliam Museum, Cambridge (Goodison and Robertson, 1967, p. 74, no. 187).

This rather pedestrian drawing corresponds, with slight variations, to a painting by Francesco in the Kunsthistorisches Museum, Vienna (Morassi, 1973, 1, no. 279, II, fig. 308). Although the drawing has been published as a preparatory study by Francesco for the painting, Pallucchini’s observation that it is a derivation, probably from the somewhat heavy hand of Giacomo Guardi, seems to us very plausible. Another drawing, even closer in detail to the Vienna painting, was formerly in the Salting collection (Simonson, 1904, repr. opp. p. 60; Morassi, 1975, no. 279, fig. 280).

124. Abraham Entertaining the Three Angels
(Genesis 18:1–15)
VERSOS. A Couple Embracing, and Other Figure Studies

Pen and brown ink, over black chalk (recto and verso). 35.3 x 22.5 cm. The sheet is made up of seven irregularly shaped pieces of paper pasted together.

Inscribed in pen and pale brown ink at lower left corner, Baccio / Ciarpi; in pen and brown ink on the verso, 5 giugno 69, followed by a column of figures.

PROVENANCE: H. M. Calmann.

Gift of H. M. Calmann, 1961 61.158.2

Abraham’s “tent” is here a sumptuous palace, before which the three angels are entertained in style. At upper right, Sarah looks on laughing, as the biblical text specifies.

The drawing entered the collection with an attribution to Baccio Ciarpi, based on the old inscription. It was soon apparent, however, that it is close in style to a large group of drawings that have been attributed to Luca Giordano; more than forty of these are in the Albertina, Vienna (Beschreibender Katalog. vi, 1941, nos. 603–604, 606–608, repr.; Ferrari, 1963, pp. 3–8, figs. 1–11). In 1965 Walter Vitzthum identified the draughtsman as the late eighteenth-century Neapolitan pasticciere Francesco Lamarra, whose work reflects the styles of both Luca Giordano and Francesco Solimena. A curious feature of some of Lamarra’s drawings is that they are patchworks of many pieces of paper irregularly joined together.
125. Draped Male Figure Standing in a Niche

Pen and brown ink, brown and gray wash, on light brown washed paper. 32.1 x 21.3 cm.

Inscribed in pen and brown ink at lower left, G. Lazzarini.

Provenance: Dan Fellows Platt (Lugt 750a and 2066b); Janos Scholz (Lugt 2933b); [Colnaghi]; purchased in London in 1962.

Rogers Fund, 1962
62.132.4

The old inscription assigning the drawing to Gregorio Lazzarini could well be correct. Lazzarini’s personality as a draughtsman is somewhat indistinct, and no drawings attributed to him can be associated with documented paintings. However, the physical type of the bearded old man in our drawing, his stubby, foreshortened feet, and the heavy drapery broken into many folds are paralleled in two paintings by Lazzarini in S. Maria della Salute, Venice: Elijah Visited by an Angel and Elijah Fed by Ravens (photographs P. Fiorentini, Venice, 766 and 767).
The rather lax pen work used to indicate the candelabra ornament on the pilasters flanking the niche is not incompatible with that in a drawing for an altarpiece in the collection of Ralph Holland, Newcastle-upon-Tyne (Bettagno, 1966, no. 44, repr.). Mr. Holland's drawing is attributed to Lazzarini in the "Reliable Venetian Hand."

FRANCESCO LONDONIO

126. Kneeling Milkmaid

Black chalk, heightened with white, on brown paper. 27.3 x 30.7 cm. Lined.

PROVENANCE: 7th Earl of Dartmouth; sale, London, Sotheby’s, May 5, 1964, part of no. 170, as Dutch School, 18th century; [Colnaghi]; purchased in London in 1965.

Rogers Fund, 1965
65.66.5

The milkmaid appears at work in a painting of a barnyard scene by Londonio that was engraved by Filippo Caporali (1794–after 1848).

This drawing was part of one of three lots of studies of animals and figures sold at Sotheby’s, London, in 1964 as “Dutch School, 18th century.” At the time of the sale, they were recognized as typical genre studies by Francesco Londonio. Two drawings from this group are now in the Ashmolean Museum, Oxford (Macandrew, 1980, no. 1021-2A, pl. LXXXVI, 1021-2B).
GIOVANNI BATTISTA ("TITTA") LUSIERI

127. Peasant on a Donkey

Watercolor, over graphite. 34.1 x 43.5 cm. (a strip measuring 3.6 cm. folded under along top edge).

Inscribed in graphite on verso, Lady Palmerston.

PROVENANCE: Purchased in 1824 from Lusieri's heirs by the 7th Earl of Elgin; then by inheritance, Lord Bruce; sale, London, Christie's, July 6, 1965, part of no. 104; [Colnaghi]; purchased in London in 1966.

Rogers Fund, 1966

Lusieri intended to use this figure on a reduced scale in the foreground of a large, panoramic watercolor, View of the Castle and Gulf of Baia, also from the Elgin collection, that was sold at Sotheby’s, London, on June 30, 1986 (no. 117, repr.). Silhouetted against trees, the same young peasant on a donkey appears in pencil outline in the center of the unfinished foreground. Our drawing may be a preparatory study, although donkey and rider are a little more than twice the size of the group sketched in the panoramic view.

128. Standing Neapolitan Girl

Watercolor, over graphite. 37.5 x 28.2 cm.
Inscribed in graphite on verso, Mr Palmerston.

PROVENANCE: Purchased in 1824 from Lusieri’s heirs by the 7th Earl of Elgin; then by inheritance, Lord Bruce; sale, London, Christie’s, July 6, 1965, no. 105; Colnaghi; purchased in London in 1966.

Rogers Fund, 1966
66.53.2

This watercolor study and No. 127 above came from a group of twenty-two figure studies by Lusieri sold from the Elgin collection in 1965. From the same group came a study of a standing Neapolitan woman and another of a Neapolitan man holding a long staff; these are now in Louisville, Kentucky (Bulletin of the J. B. Speed Art Museum, XXV, June 1966, p. 7, repr.).

129. Classical Landscape with Hunters in the Foreground

Graphite. Framing lines in pen and brown ink and gray wash. 34.5 x 49.0 cm. (overall). The drawing, excluding the border, measures 32.4 x 46.7 cm.
Signed in black chalk within the upper left margin of the drawn surface, Lusier f., in pen and pale brown ink in another hand on a folded tab of paper below lower left margin, For His Majesty.

PROVENANCE: Martin Birnbaum.

Gift of Martin Birnbaum, 1966
66.117.1

This and the following highly finished drawing, both inspired by the landscapes of Claude, came to the Museum in 1966 with an attribution to Jean Pillement.
GIOVANNI BATTISTA LUSIERI (NO. 129)

(1728–1808). This was not implausible, since such a meticulous use of graphite and refined shading is to be found in the work of that French draughtsman.

It was not until 1983 that Lawrence Turčić detected the almost hidden signature at the upper left margin of this drawing. The form used in the signature, Lusier f. (i.e., without the final i of the artist's name), occurs on two very large watercolor views of Naples by Lusieri from the Elgin collection that were sold at Sotheby's, London, on June 30, 1986: no. 105, signed and dated Titta Lusier f. 1783, and no. 106, signed and dated Titta Lusier 1782. The very large View of the Bay of Naples now at the J. Paul Getty Museum, Malibu, is signed and dated G. B. Lusier 1791.

The identification of our drawing reveals a previously unknown aspect of Lusieri's work. These imaginary classical landscapes are quite different in technique and conception from Lusieri's highly detailed and realistic watercolor panoramas. The apparent influence of Pillement can be explained by the high reputation that the French artist's work enjoyed throughout Europe. Lusieri could have seen drawings by Pillement in Rome or Naples.

Graphite. 36.4 x 47.5 cm.

PROVENANCE: Martin Birnbaum.

Gift of Martin Birnbaum, 1966

Though not signed, this drawing is clearly by the same hand as No. 129 and, like the above drawing, entered the Museum's collection with an attribution to Jean Pillement.

ALESSANDRO MAGNASCO (NO. 131)

This subject, the angel awakening the sleeping Elijah and ordering him to eat and drink of the round cake and the jar of water that had miraculously appeared in the wilderness, was treated by Magnasco in other wash drawings. A sheet in the Kupferstichkabinett, Berlin-Dahlem, is close to ours, although the figure of Elijah is reversed (Geiger, 1945, pl. 68; Dreyer, 1979, no. 69, repr.). In two drawings formerly in the Hessisches Landesmuseum, Darmstadt, Elijah is awakened by the touch of the angel’s right hand (Geiger, 1945, pls. 66, 67).

A painting of this subject in a landscape setting in which the meager shrubbery of the biblical account is replaced by much richer vegetation was on the market in Munich some years ago (Geiger, 1949, pl. 209).

MARCO MARCOLA
Verona ca. 1740–Verona 1793

132. Gaius Mucius Scaevola Thrusting His Right Hand into Fire

Pen and black ink, gray-brown wash. 28.0 x 40.6 cm. Scattered stains.

Inscribed in pen and light brown ink on verso, Di Marco Marcola.

PROVENANCE: Unidentified collector’s mark on verso (the letters A and G superimposed, in red; not in Lugli); [Baderou]; purchased in Paris in 1964.

Rogers Fund, 1964
64.152.2

Although this design comes very close in linear style to drawings assigned with confidence to Giovanni Battista Marcola, the eighteenth-century inscription Di Marco Marcola on the reverse should be respected.

The drawing is thus an example of the work of Marco in which the influence of his father, Giovanni Battista, is predominant.

133. Scene from Ancient History
verso. Leg and Arm of a Nude Male Figure

Red chalk, heightened with white, on beige paper (recto); red chalk, stumped (verso). 25.2 x 39.1 cm.

Inscribed in brush and black ink on verso, Di Nicola Marcola; in graphite at upper margin, 91. Z. / 40x.

Provenance: Unidentified collector’s mark on verso; [Victor Spark]; purchased in New York in 1968.

Rogers Fund, 1968

The eldest son of Giovanni Battista, Nicola Marcola had a brief career as an artist, dying at the age of thirty-two, and only a few of his paintings and drawings seem to have survived. Two sheets in the Biblioteca Civica, Verona, have been assigned to him (Romina Meneghello, 1983, p. 120, pls. 208–210). These are stylistically compatible with our drawing, which bears an old and probably contemporary inscription, Di Nicola Marcola, on the verso.

The mysterious subject, a scene from ancient history in which a severed head is about to be placed in a scale, has not yet been identified, although many learned colleagues have been consulted.
AGOSTINO MASUCCI
Rome 1692–Rome 1758

134. Studies for the Education of the Virgin

Pen and brown ink. 21.5 x 22.7 cm. Vertical crease right of center. Inscribed in pen and brown ink at lower right margin, m 231.

PROVENANCE: Walter C. Baker.

Bequest of Walter C. Baker, 1971
1972.118.12

The sheet bears six pen sketches for the group of St. Anne teaching the Virgin to read in one of Masucci's last paintings, the Education of the Virgin, signed and dated 1757, in SS. Nome di Maria, Rome (Martini and Casanova, 1962, p. 75, fig. 15; Titi, 1987, 11, fig. 1000). Other drawings for this altarpiece have survived: a chalk study for the head of St. Anne identified by Anthony M. Clark in the Held collection and now in the National Gallery of Art, Washington, D.C., and a pen and wash study for the whole composition discovered by Lawrence Turkčić in the Martin von Wagner Museum, Würzburg (repr. Turkčić, 1982, fig. 2 and pl. 25, respectively).

The sheet is numbered m 231 at lower right. Clark has pointed out that such inventory (?) numbers, preceded by a lowercase m, occur on drawings by eighteenth-century Roman artists such as Baroni, Cades, Ghezzi, and Masucci; the highest number so far recorded is m 1014 on a drawing in Edinburgh attributed by Clark to Masucci (Andrews, 1968, fig. 261, as Circle of the Carracci).

135. The Virgin Appearing at Mass

Red chalk, pen and brown ink. Squared in red chalk. Framing lines in pen and brown ink. 34.7 x 25.2 cm. Lined.

PROVENANCE: [Claude Kuhn]; [Lutz Rießer]; purchased in New York in 1989.
AGOSTINO MASUCCI (No. 135)

Van Day Truex Fund, 1989
1989.285

The attribution to Masucci is due to Manuela Mena Marqués, who pointed out that the same composition is studied in a drawing in the Biblioteca Nacional, Madrid, also recognized by her as the work of Masucci (Mena Marqués, 1984, no. 162, repr.). In both these designs the Virgin appears above an altar to a vested priest, who raises his hands in wonder. The presence of a covered chalice and open missal on the altar indicates that the vision occurs during the celebration of Mass. In both drawings the Virgin raises her right arm, and in our design she points at what seems to be an angel holding a large scapular, lightly indicated in red chalk at upper left.

ALESSANDRO MAURO

Venice ?– Turin before 1737

136. Design for a Festival Gondola

Pen and brown ink, over graphite. Framing lines in pen and brown ink. 33.2 x 48.2 cm. Vertical crease at center.

Inscribed in pen and brown ink at lower right, bisona; in light brown ink, Alessan? Mauro fe In?.

PROVENANCE: [Armando Neerman]; John Steiner.

Gift of John Steiner, 1976
1976.343

Minerva seated, holding a spear and a helmet, presides over a bisona filled with trophies. An allegorical figure of Fortune stands on a globe at the prow of the festival craft.

Alessandro Mauro was one of a family of decorators and stage designers active in Italy and South Germany in the eighteenth century. The present sheet is, to our knowledge, the only signed drawing by Alessandro to have survived. The inscription fe In? suggests that the drawing was meant to be engraved. An even more elaborate design for a bisona decorated in the “Chinese” manner for the regatta in honor of the Prince Elector of Saxony on May 27, 1716, was in fact engraved by Andrea Zucchi (Lorenzetti, 1937, p. 45, no. 12, fig. 78).
DOMENICO MONDO

The attribution to Domenico Mondo was made in 1964 by James Byam Shaw. The subject is treated in other drawings by the artist; one is in a private collection in New York (Frick Art Reference Library photograph 38723), and another was on the art market in London in 1978 (Roli and Sestieri, 1981, no. 202, repr.).

FRANCESCO DE MURA (NO. 138)

Francesco de Mura executed three major ceiling paintings representing the Assumption of the Virgin, all of them much influenced by the example of Francesco Solimena. The first of these was an Assumption painted about 1727 on the vault of the sacristy of the Annunziata in Airola, near Benevento (Rizzio, 1978, p. 97, fig. 5, p. 99). An oil sketch for this fresco is in the Pio Monte della Misericordia, Naples (Causa, 1970, p. 31). In 1737 De Mura signed and dated a ceiling painting on canvas destined for a church in Gallipoli and now in the episcopal palace of that city (Pasculli Ferrara, 1981, p. 49, fig. 1, p. 64, note 4). Domenica Pasculli Ferrara cites three oil sketches for the Gallipoli Assumption. In 1986 Lawrence Turcic identified a pen and wash drawing by De Mura in the Louvre as a study for the Gallipoli picture; the Louvre drawing had been classified as a work of the studio of Francesco Solimena (Inv. 9787; Monbeig-Goguel and Vitzthum, 1967, no. 83).

The most ambitious Assumption of the Virgin by De Mura is that painted in 1751 on the ceiling of the Nunziatella in Naples (Enggass, 1964, fig. 7). An oil sketch for this fresco is preserved in the Museo di Capodimonte, Naples (Causa, 1957, pl. 36), and a presumably autograph replica of the Capodimonte sketch is in the Art Gallery of Ontario, Toronto (Enggass, 1964, fig. 8). Our drawing may be an early preparation for the monumental Nunziatella fresco. There are, however, notable differences between the drawing and the fresco. The apparition of the Holy Trinity at the summit of the painting is lacking in the drawing, where there are fewer figures in the foreground. In the drawing the setting is architectural, while in the fresco the background is a landscape. There are also differences in the shape of the field.

The attribution of this drawing to De Mura, made at the time of its acquisition in 1971, seems justified by comparing the facial types and the indications of drapery, hands, and feet with those in No. 139 below, which is certainly a study for a painting by the artist.

139. The Vision of St. Benedict

Pen and brown and gray ink, gray wash, over graphite. 56.5 x 38.2 cm. Cut to shape of field. Horizontal crease at center. Repaired losses.

PROVENANCE: [Colnaghi]; purchased in New York in 1987.

Harry G. Sperling Fund, 1987 1987.191

St. Benedict stands at the center of the composition, looking upward at an apparition of the Holy Trinity. Around the saint are gathered members of the male and female religious orders that follow his monastic Rule, as well as lay men and women devoted to his cult.

The drawing is a study with a number of variations for a ceiling fresco, signed and dated 1740, at the center of the nave of SS. Severino e Sossio, Naples (Spinosa, 1986, no. 252, fig. 299). In the number and in the placement of the figures, an oil sketch at Capodimonte in Naples is closer to the finished fresco than our drawing (Naples, 1979, no. 89, repr.).

FRANCESCO NARICE (NARICI)

140. The Assumption of the Virgin
FRANCESCO NARICE (NARICI) (NO. 140)

Brush, gray and cream tempera, on gray washed paper. 33.8 x 23.5 cm. Scattered abrasions.

Inscriptions in graphite on verso, an unidentified paraph followed by Francesco Narici / 29 marzo 1839 —.

PROVENANCE: [Colnaghi]; purchased in London in 1962.

Rogers Fund, 1962
62.130.4

The drawing was acquired in 1962 with a not implausible attribution to Francesco de Mura. It was not until 1986 that Lawrence Turcic deciphered the inscription dated 1839 on the verso that gives the drawing to Narice, an artist who was indeed strongly influenced by the style of De Mura, particularly in his monochrome sketches in oil or tempera. Drawings comparable in style and technique, some of them connected with paintings executed by Narice in his native Genoa, are in the National Gallery of Scotland, Edinburgh (Andrews, 1968, fig. 560), in the Bibliothèque Municipale, Rouen (Rosenberg and Schnapper, 1970, nos. 69–72, repr.), and in the Istituto Nazionale per la Grafica, Rome (Garms and Prosperi Valenti Rodinò, 1985, nos. 59 and 60, repr.).

Mary Newcome kindly points out that many of the significant features of our tempera sketch are to be found in an Assumption now in the church of the Immacolata, Genoa.

BARTOLOMMEO NAZARI?

Clusone (Bergamo) 1699–Milan 1758

141. Portrait of a Man in a Monastic Habit

Black chalk, stumpèd, heightened with white, on gray-green paper. 29.6 x 22.4 cm.

PROVENANCE: Ferruccio Asta (Lugt Supp. 116a); Mr. and Mrs. Janos Scholz; transferred from the Department of Prints and Photographs, 1988.

Gift of Mr. and Mrs. Janos Scholz, 1952
52.218.1

This and the following two drawings were part of a large group of portraits, most of them with elaborate surrounds and cartouches, that come from an album that had been broken up by the Venetian dealer Ferruccio Asta before 1944. Janos Scholz still possesses nine of these portraits and a title page with the inscription Família Agudia e Sormani, indicating a Lombard provenance (one portrait repr. Pignatti, 1965–1, no. 106; another Bean and Stampfle, 1971, no. 169). In 1952 Mr. Scholz presented another portrait to the Rhode Island School of Design, Providence (Noris, 1982, p. 267, fig. 5). Two further portraits from the Asta album are in the Rijksprentenkabinet, Amsterdam (one repr. Aikema and Meijer, 1985, no. 104). Another is in the Frits Lugt Collection, Fondation Custodia, Paris (Byam Shaw, 1983, 1, no. 293, 111, pl. 342).

The attribution of these portrait drawings to Bartolommeo Nazari was first proposed by Janos Scholz and has been generally accepted. However, in 1985 Bernard Aikema pointed out that an even larger group of stylistically similar portraits in the Biblioteca Ambrosiana and in the Gabinetto delle Stampe del Comune, Milan, were attributed, without documentary evidence, by Franco Arese to the engraver Benigno Bossi (Storia di Milano, XII, Milan, 1959, 186 figs. throughout the vol-
142. Portrait of a Man Wearing a Wig

Black chalk, stumped, heightened with white, on gray-green paper. 29.8 x 22.4 cm.

143. Portrait of a Man in a Cap

Black chalk, stumped, heightened with white, on faded gray-green paper. 30.0 x 22.4 cm.

Provenance: Ferruccio Asta (Lugt Supp. 116a); marchese Antonio Roi, Vicenza (according to Virch); Walter C. Baker.

Bequest of Walter C. Baker, 1971 1972.118.262

In style, these portraits are unlike drawings that can be attributed with certainty to Bossi. Many of these portrait drawings are rather stiff and awkward, and the heads are often ill connected to the shoulders. A number of Bartolommeo Nazari’s painted portraits—some of them now lost—were reproduced in engravings by Carlo Orsolini, Pietro Monaco, Marco Pittrari, Francesco Zucchi, and others. For these reproductive prints, often intended for book illustrations, the engraver supplied rich frames and cartouches similar in form and elaboration to those found on these portrait drawings (Noris, 1982, pp. 238–239, six such engravings repr. pp. 262 and 264). The importance of these ornamental surrounds and the weakness of the portraits themselves seem to suggest the work of an engraver-copyist. Nonetheless the issue is complicated by the fact that almost nothing is known of Nazari himself as a draughtsman, except for a pen and wash study of heads in the Albertina, Vienna, ascribed to him in the “Reliable Venetian Hand” (Bettagno, 1966, no. 108, repr.).
PIETRO ANTONIO NOVELLI
Venice 1729—Venice 1804

144. Diana Visiting the Sleeping Endymion

Pen and brown ink, gray wash, over black chalk. 29.0 x 38.0 cm. overall, including an area 3.6 cm. wide on which the drawing is continued on the right in the artist's hand.

PROVENANCE: James Jackson Jarves; Cornelius Vanderbilt.

Gift of Cornelius Vanderbilt, 1880

In the past the drawing has been attributed to Van Dyck, no doubt because of the elegance of the figures. However, it is a typical example of the draughtsmanship of Pietro Antonio Novelli. The parallel hatching on the figures, the use of broad diagonal shading in the background, and the contrast between brown pen lines and gray wash are all characteristic.

145. Enchained Nude Prisoner

Pen and brown ink, brown, gray, and black wash, heightened with white, over black chalk, on faded violet washed paper. 27.2 x 15.5 cm.

PROVENANCE: Marquis Jean de Bailleul (Lugt 335); vicomte Bernard d'Hendecourt; Hendecourt sale, London, Sotheby's, May 8–10, 1929, no. 267, as Pietro Tacca; [Savile Gallery]; Mr. and Mrs. R. Kirk Askew, Jr.

GIOVANNI ODAZZI

146. St. Gregory the Great Interceding for Souls in Purgatory

Pen and brown ink, brown wash, over black chalk. 31.2 x 20.3 cm. Arched top. Horizontal crease at center.

PROVENANCE: Cephas G. Thompson.

BIBLIOGRAPHY: Metropolitan Museum Handbook, 1895, p. 41, no. 712, "Lanfranco.—The Pope Offering a Prayer to the Father."
Gift of Cephas G. Thompson, 1887 87.12.42

St. Gregory the Great, pope, is identified by the dove that hovers at his ear and the papal tiara held by a putto. On clouds above, the Virgin also intercedes with Christ for souls in Purgatory. Below, angels lift these souls from the cleansing fires.

This drawing was identified as a characteristic work

The drawing belongs to a large group of studies by Novelli that are copied after or derived from sculptural models. Some of these—including ours—seem to be very free copies after the chained bronze slaves, I Mori, by Pietro Tacca that surround the base of the monument to Ferdinand I de' Medici in Livorno (1626). Novelli may have copied metal or plaster reductions of these celebrated figures. One such drawing is in the Robert Lehman Collection at the Metropolitan Museum (George Knox in Lehman Collection, vi, 1987, no. 64, repr.); another, like ours on a violet preparation, is in the Ashmolean Museum, Oxford (Macandrew, 1980, pp. 179—180, no. 1029A). All three of these drawings were attributed to Pietro Tacca in the past, though the draughtsmanship seems clearly that of Pietro Antonio Novelli.
GIOVANNI ODAZZI (NO. 146)

of Giovanni Odazzi by Lawrence Turčič in 1987; it had previously been classified amongst the anonymous Italian drawings. The physical types and the pen work here, which owe a great deal to the example of Gaulli, are paralleled in a large design by Odazzi in the University of Michigan Museum of Art that is a study for the cupola of the Elici Chapel, S. Sabina, Rome (Wunder, 1965, no. 14, repr.; for the cupola, see Trimarchi, 1979, no. 19, figs. 21, 22).

SANTE PACINI

Florence 1735—Florence ca. 1790

147. Saints and Prophets in Glory, after Bernardino Poccetti

Black chalk. Framing lines in pen and brown ink and gray wash. 21.2 x 31.8 cm. Lined.

Inscribed in pen and black ink on Mariette mount, Pictum saello domestico Marchion. Gerniorum Florentiae a Bern. Poccetti; in cartouche, DELINEABAT / SANTES PACINI

Rogers Fund, 1966

Pierre-Jean Mariette possessed—and may even have commissioned—a good many copies by Sante Pacini after paintings by earlier Florentine masters. These copies record major works, often frescoes, by Cristofano Allori (Mariette sale, no. 122), Giovanni da S. Giovanni (no. 476; now Darmstadt AE 2082), six after Masaccio in the Brancacci Chapel (no. 497), Santi di Tito (no. 548; now Darmstadt AE 2081), and Cosimo Ulivelli (no. 547). Under no. 607, the Mariette sale catalogue lists eight copies by Pacini after Poccetti. Four of these are now in the Cabinet des Dessins, Musée du Louvre (Viatte, 1988, nos. 360–363, repr.). Our drawing accounts for one more in the group of eight; the remaining three copies have not been located.
As the old inscription on the mount attests, our drawing reproduces decorations by Poccetti in the private chapel of the Palazzo Gerini, Florence. Stefania Vasetti kindly informs us in a letter of October 10, 1988, that Pacini has copied the fresco by Poccetti on the left wall of the chapel. On the opposite wall, Poccetti painted the Fathers of the Church discoursing on the Holy Sacrament.

PIETRO GIACOMO PALMIERI
Bologna 1737—Turin 1804

148. Trompe-l’Oeil Exercise: Prints on a Table Top

Pen and brown ink, brown wash, over traces of graphite. 41.3 x 56.1 cm.

Signed and dated at lower center, Pietro Giacomo Palmieri Disegno a Penna L’anno 1766--; various inscriptions by Palmieri identifying prints represented.

PROVENANCE: Sir Bruce Ingram (Lugt Supp. 14054 on old mount); Carl Winter (his mark, cwr, at lower right, not in Lugt); sale, London, Sotheby’s, July 1, 1965, no. 82; [Schab]; purchased in New York in 1969.

Palmieri was both a painter and a printmaker, but he was above all a virtuoso draughtsman capable of brilliant trompe-l’œil effects. The prints that figure here—inscribed with the names of Berchem, Della Bella, Callor, and Jean Pesne (after Guercino)—are in most cases copied fairly exactly. However, Della Bella’s mustachioed Pole sports an earring added by Palmieri. The illusionistic effect is heightened by the bent corners of the prints with their cast shadows.

This and the following drawing are signed and dated
PIETRO GIACOMO PALMIERI (NO. 148)

1766, while Palmieri was still in Bologna. He continued to produce similar amusing calligraphic exercises after he settled in Turin in 1778. In the Biblioteca Reale of that city there is a trompe l’oeil with prints that is dated 1780 (Griseri, 1978, no. 79, repr.).

Unlike the previous illusionistic display of prints, in which earlier masters were honored, Palmieri here takes credit for most of the work shown. At lower left appears the corner of a musical manuscript with a rolled-up edge, the score for a Messa a 4 Voci con Strumenti.

James David Draper was the first to give a complete account of the subject and purpose of this exceptional drawing. As the contemporary inscription attached to the lower margin of the sheet attests, this large view is a bozzetto for a painting in a private collection in London representing the drawing of the Roman lottery on the balcony of the Palazzo di Montecitorio (Draper, 1969, figs. 1–3). The painting is said to have been commissioned by Cardinal Domenico Orsini (1719–1789; created September 9, 1743), and the inscription itself cannot predate October 1749, when Panini was granted the title Cavaliere dello Sperone d'oro.

The view is very accurate, although Panini has taken certain liberties in showing on the right the whole Column of Marcus Aurelius, which in fact at the time was obscured by buildings separating the Piazza Colonna from the Piazza di Montecitorio. At the right is the base of the Column of Antoninus Pius, excavated near the Palazzo di Montecitorio in 1703 and in 1705 set up by Carlo Fontana in the square, where it remained until 1764. Today it is in the Cortile della Pigna of the Vatican. The obelisk that now stands in the center of the square was erected there between 1788 and 1792.

In composition the drawing corresponds quite closely to the painting, but in the latter the figures are larger in scale and differently grouped. Edward Croft-Murray identified two chalk figure studies by Panini for the painting in a sketchbook preserved in the British Museum (Old Master Drawings, xi, March 1937, p. 61, pl. 57), and James Draper found further figure studies in the Kupferstichkabinett, Berlin-Dahlem, in the Witt Collection at the Courtauld Institute, London, and in a Swiss private collection (Draper, 1969, pp. 29–33, pls. 18–24).

The Scalinata was built in 1723–1725 on the designs of the architect Francesco De Sanctis. Constructed with funds supplied by a French diplomat, it leads from the Piazza di Spagna up to SS. Trinità dei Monti, a church of French foundation then served by the Minims. The view is essentially the same today, although an obelisk was set up at the top of the steps by Pius VI in 1786, and the Hassler Hotel has replaced most of the low buildings to the right of the church.

Paintings of the Scalinata appear in two versions of Panini's Vedute di Roma moderna, one in the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, the other in The Metropolitan Museum of Art, both of which are dated 1757 (Arisi, 1986, nos. 471 and 475, repr., respectively). No independent painting of the Scalinata has survived, and it is possible that the scene incorporated in the composite views in Boston and New York is based on our watercolor.

The drawing has a distinguished provenance, and its ownership can be traced back to Jacques-Laure Le Sotto di Roma, da esso eseguito per S.E. Ecco Cardinale. Domenico Corrini.
GIOVANNI PAOLO PANINI (NO. 151)

Tonnelier de Breteuil, bailli-grand-croix of the Sovereign Order of Malta from 1757 and ambassador of the order in Rome from 1758 to 1777. As ambassador, Breteuil would have officiated in the Palazzo di Malta on the via Condotti that leads out of the Piazza di Spagna at the foot of the Scalinata.

An old and fairly exact copy of our drawing is in the Biblioteca dell'Istituto Nazionale d'Archeologia e Storia dell'Arte, Rome (Cianfarani, 1956, p. 40, no. 170, pl. vii).

The inscription IGNOTO DEO on the altar in the left background toward which the orator gesticulates identifies the scene as St. Paul preaching on the Areopagus. There the Apostle of the Gentiles had found an altar dedicated to an “unknown god,” which became the subject of a discourse recorded in the Acts of the Apostles.

The drawing is related to but does not correspond exactly with several paintings by Panini that also date from the 1730s and represent St. Paul preaching (Arisi, 1986, nos. 213, 235, 262, 263, repr.).

Panini made many such studies for the accessory figures in his painted views of Rome. The Kupferstichkabinett, Berlin-Dahlem, and the British Museum, London, possess substantial groups of sketches of this sort, executed in black chalk, red chalk, or a combination of the two (Arisi, 1961, Dis. 37–40, 70–72, 77–78, 111–116, 136–146, 148–154, 163–167, 171–193, 197–203 [Berlin]; 217–355 [London]). The present example is unusual in technique; the figure is modeled in transparent brown wash over summary graphite contours. In spite of this difference in technique and the fact that the attribution to Panini is of recent date, our figure sketch seems compatible with those in Berlin and London.

A sheet of similar figure studies, in gray wash over summary black chalk contours, has recently been acquired by The J. Paul Getty Museum, Malibu (Goldner, 1988, no. 25, repr.).

FILIPPO PEDRINI

Bologna 1763–Bologna 1856

154. Orpheus and Eurydice

Pen and brown ink, brown wash, over black chalk. 27.8 x 19.6 cm. Lined.

Inscribed in pen and brown ink at lower left margin of old mount, Giacomo Gandolfi.

Provenance: Cephas G. Thompson.
Orpheus guides Eurydice out of the Underworld as the three-headed Cerberus barks savagely at lower left. The drawing, attributed in the past to Gaetano Gandolfi, was ascribed to Filippo Pedrini by Mimì Cazott, who associates it with a small painting by the artist in the Pinacoteca Nazionale, Bologna (Bolaffi, viii, p. 383, fig. 540).

In the Pinacoteca di Brera, Milan, there is a pen and wash sketch of the same subject, in which Eurydice raises both hands in fright and Orpheus is seen from behind (no. 135). The pen work in the Milan version is somewhat confused, but it might also be the work of Pedrini.

155. Allegorical Figure of Chastity

Pen and brown ink, brown wash, over graphite. 28.9 x 20.6 cm.

Inscribed in pen and brown ink at lower center, Castità; in graphite at bottom right, Pedrini Giuseppe / 20; inscribed in pen and brown ink on verso, Per Sua E ... il Sig. C. Opzoni fatto da ... Padr ...; in graphite, Pedrini Gius. Venezia discopo dol Maggiore.

PROVENANCE: Unidentified collector’s mark (a coat of arms stamped blind); H. M. Calmann.

BIBLIOGRAPHY: Annual Report, 1970–1971, p. 15, as Giuseppe Pedrini.

Gift of H. M. Calmann, 1971

Chastity is identified by her attributes: the column at left, the scepter she holds, the snake at her foot, the putto with a pair of doves, and a stylized cinnamon tree in the background.
FILIPPO PEDRINI? (NO. 155)

The partial illegibility of the old inscription on the verso led a modern collector to attribute the drawing to the very obscure Venetian artist Giuseppe Pedrini. However, the work is clearly Bolognese and may reasonably be given to Filippo Pedrini or, perhaps, to his father, Domenico (Bologna 1728–1800)—there is as yet no clear distinction between the work of father and son.

We have been unable to find the literary source for this cruel scene of summary military justice. An oriental monarch, identified by a crowned turban that has fallen to the ground, is about to lose his right foot to the axe wielded by the figure kneeling in the center.

Both the composition and the physical types owe much to the example of Salvator Rosa, to whom the drawing was attributed in the past. Rosa’s etching, the Death of Attilius Regulus (Wallace, 1979, no. 110, repr.), seems to have been a primary source for this drawing by Piattoli. The attribution to this artist was proposed by Ugo Ruggeri in 1976.

GIOVANNI BATTISTA PIAZZETTA

Venice 1685—Venice 1754

159. David with the Head of Goliath
VERSOS. Lower Leg and Right Foot

Black chalk, on gray-blue paper. 19.1 x 25.9 cm. Scattered stains. Surface somewhat abraded.

Inscribed in pen and dark brown ink at lower left margin by the "Reliable Venetian Hand," Giambattista Piazzetta Veneziano.
PROVENANCE: "Reliable Venetian Hand" (Lugt Supp. 3005c–d); [Colnaghi]; purchased in London in 1966.

Rogers Fund, 1966
66.3.4

This vigorous figure study and No. 160 below bear convincing attributions to Piazzetta in the "Reliable Venetian Hand." Such inscriptions, in neat, slanting letters, giving the artist’s name and place of origin, are the work of a still-unidentified Venetian collector of the eighteenth century whose taste and exceptional erudition were the subject of an instructive exhibition organized by Alessandro Bettagno in 1966. Other drawings that belonged to this collector are Nos. 38, 166, and 273 in this catalogue.

Piazzetta reversed this figure of David holding the severed head of Goliath in two paintings: one in a private collection (Mariuz, 1982, no. 29, repr.), the other in the Gemäldegalerie, Dresden (Pallucchini, 1936, fig. 61; Mariuz, 1982, pl. X, in color, no. 50).
160. Executioner Holding Up a Severed Head

Black chalk, heightened with white, on gray-blue paper. 40.5 x 26.6 cm.

Inscribed in pen and brown ink at lower right margin by the "Reliable Venetian Hand," Giamb. ... Piazzetta Venezia! (partially abraded); in graphite at lower left, Sebastiano Ponzio and Ponzio.

Provenance: "Reliable Venetian Hand" (Lugt Supp. 3005c-2); [Victor Spark]; purchased in New York in 1961.

Rogers Fund, 1961

A similar mustachioed executioner, posed somewhat differently, appears in Piazzetta’s painting The Martyrdom of St. Paul, now in an Italian private collection (Pallucchini, 1956, pl. 113; Mariuz, 1982, no. 156, repr.). Ugo Ruggeri was the first to point out that the figure in this drawing was copied in a small Piazzettanesque painting, The Martyrdom of St. Erasmo, in the Ca’ Rezzonico, Venice (Ruggeri, 1973, p. 24, fig. 21; Los Angeles, 1976, p. 165, repr.). The painting is generally ascribed to Giulia Lama, and Ruggeri was led to attribute the present drawing and No. 159 above to this rather derivative artist. However, both our drawings display a vigor and authority that is absent in the graphic material presented by Ruggeri as the work of Lama. If she was indeed the painter of the Ca’ Rezzonico picture, Giulia Lama must have simply borrowed this executioner from Piazzetta’s repertory of figures.

GIOVANNI BATTISTA PIAZZETTA (NO. 161)

No. 162 below is probably the pendant to this brilliant and exceptionally well-preserved drawing. Both are dated about 1740 by George Knox.

162. Boy with an Egg, Girl with a Hen, and a Watching Woman

Black chalk, heightened with white, on blue-gray paper faded to brown. 39.7 x 52.7 cm. Vertical crease at center. Upper corners made up.

PROVENANCE: [Giuseppe Cellini, Rome]; Walter C. Baker.

Probably the pendant to No. 161 above, and thus also datable about 1740.
163. Boy with a Staff

Black chalk, heightened with white, on blue-gray paper faded to light brown. 31.9 x 25.0 cm. Upper right corner made up.

Margaretta Salinger called attention to two copies of this drawing, one in the Albertina, Vienna (Beschreibender Katalog, 1, 1926, no. 252, repr.), and another, the present whereabouts of which is unknown (Rey, 1922, p. 163, repr.). George Knox dates the drawing about 1715–1718.

164. Girl with a Hen

Black chalk, heightened with white, on blue-gray paper faded to light brown. 37.8 x 27.1 cm.

Provenance: Dan Fellows Platt; [Ferargil Gallery]; purchased in New York in 1938.

Harris Brisbane Dick Fund, 1938

George Knox dates this drawing about 1715–1718.

Andrew Robison has kindly identified the fragmentary print on the reverse of the drawing as a proof impression of the bottom right corner of Plate XII (Focillon, 1918, no. 566) of Piranesi's Trofeo o sia magnifica colonna colcide. . . . What appears to be a grassy hillock when the print is read vertically is actually the irregular surface of an eroded channel in the marble base of the Column of Trajan. In the finished plate the vertical parallel lines, broken in our proof impression, were corrected, and the number 12.7 and a dotted line and an arrow were added at the lower margin. Robison points out that the undated print was probably executed in about 1775, a date compatible with the style of the figure studies on the recto of the sheet.

GIOVANNI BATTISTA PIVA

Belluno, died ca. 1750

166. Head of a Woman

Black chalk, heightened with white, on gray-blue paper. 17.1 x 14.7 cm.

Inscribed in pen and brown ink by the "Reliable Venetian Hand" at lower right, Giambattista Piva Bellunese, in pen and brown ink on verso, L. 29-2-d [?].

PROVENANCE: "Reliable Venetian Hand" (Lugt Supp. 3005c-d); mark mistakenly associated with Pierre Crozat (Lugt 474); sale, London, Sotheby's, March 30, 1987, no. 109, pl. 12; Jak Katalan.

Gift of Jak Katalan, in memory of Lawrence Turčić, 1989 1989.172

Giovanni Battista Piva (sometimes called Biva) is a rather shadowy figure, a painter and etcher said to have been a pupil of Giovanni Battista Tiepolo. The eighteenth-century collector gifted with the "Reliable Venetian Hand" possessed three drawings ascribed to Piva, all of them small. In addition to the present example, there are an Infant Hercules Strangling a Serpent, presented by James Byam Shaw to the Cini Foundation, Venice (Bettagno, 1966, no. 126, repr.), and a Moses and Aaron, presented by Jean-Luc Baroni to the Frits Lugt Collection, Fondation Custodia, Paris (Byam Shaw, 1983, 1, no. 299 A, III, pl. 510).

In this somewhat confused and crowded composition, King Ahab is enthroned at upper right. Before him stands Elijah, who orders the massacre of the prophets of Baal, unsuccessful in their attempt to bring rain to the parched land. In the foreground smolder the remains of Elijah’s sacrifice, which was acceptable to the Lord.

170. Exaltation of the Holy Cross
Black chalk, traces of white heightening, on beige paper. Faint figure studies in black chalk on verso. 41.2 x 76.3 cm. The sheet composed of two pieces of paper joined vertically. Four vertical creases.

At the center of the composition Christ in glory points to the Holy Cross supported by angels. In the foreground are seated, among angels and putti, St. Peter, the Blessed Virgin, Eve, Adam, St. John the Baptist, and another Apostle, probably St. Paul. The old inscription on the reverse of the sheet correctly identifies the purpose of the drawing: it is a study for the central section of the frescoed cupola in the chapel dedicated to the Holy Cross and the Passion of Christ, the second on the right in S. Frediano in Cestello, Florence. This chapel was endowed in 1700 (Paatz, II, 1941, p. 150).

VITTORIO AMEDEO RAPOUS
Turin ca. 1728–Turin ca. 1797

171. The Vision of St. Hubert
Pen and brown ink, brown wash, over black chalk. The paper washed blue outside framing lines. 29.6 x 19.0 cm.

Inscribed in pen and brown ink at lower margin, Di Vittorio Amedeo Rapous Pittore del Accad. Reale di Torino.

PROVENANCE: [Goldschmidt]; purchased in New York in 1983.

The conversion of St. Hubert, later to be bishop of Liège, is ascribed to the miraculous apparition of a crucifix between the horns of a stag while he was out hunting on Good Friday. A similar vision figures in the legend of the Early Christian martyr St. Eustace.

The drawing is a study with a number of slight variations for an altarpiece by Rapous, datable 1768, in an oratory dedicated to St. Hubert in the Palazzina di Caccia at Stupinigi, near Turin (Grisera, 1963, pl. 102; Mallè, 1981, p. 209, repr. in color opp. p. 206).

GIOVANNI AGOSTINO RATTI
Savona 1699–Genoa 1775

172. St. Nicholas of Bari Resuscitating Three Children Discovered in a Tub of Brine
Red chalk. Contours incised. Verso rubbed in red chalk. 42.3 x 30.4 cm.

Inscribed in pen and brown ink at lower left, Ovulo in Maiolica che feci / al Sig. Giuseppe Gualtieri di / Albisola; at lower right, Gian Agostino Ratti fec.

PROVENANCE: [Jeudwine]; purchased in London in 1665.

Rogers Fund, 1965
65.112.5

As the old and no doubt autograph inscription indicates, this is a design for an oval maiolica plaque, and “Giuseppe Gualtieri di Albisola” may have been the patron who commissioned the work. In the early part of his career, Giovanni Agostino Ratti was active as a painter of maiolica in his native Savona and presumably in nearby Albisola, both of which were important centers of faience manufacture in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. Signed paintings on maiolica by Giovanni Agostino bear the dates 1720 and 1721.

The rubbing of the reverse in red chalk suggests that the contours were meant to be transferred directly onto the unfired plaque as a guide for the painter.
MARCO RICCI
Belluno 1676—Venice 1729

173. Extensive Pastoral Landscape

Gouache, on kidskin. 30.8 x 45.7 cm. Lined.

Rogers Fund, 1967

67.67

This landscape and No. 174 below are characteristic examples of one of Marco Ricci’s specialties, highly picturesque imaginary views executed in bright, opaque gouache on kidskin—a technique that Marco may indeed have invented. The nonporous, slightly granular surface of the kidskin serves as an ideal support for thick applications of gouache in a lively gamut of colors. The subjects of these drawings, really small paintings intended to be framed and hung as such, are extremely varied.

This gouache was executed on paper rather than kidskin, and it consequently lacks the coloristic brilliance of Nos. 173 and 174 above. Marco Ricci excelled in the invention of architectural capriccios, and such compositions had a marked influence on Canaletto and Francesco Guardi. The ruined circular temple with Corinthian columns seen here at the right reappears in an etching by Marco Ricci (Pilo, 1964, no. 227, repr.).
MARCO RICCI (NO. 175)

Rogers Fund, 1969 69.126.2

Marco Ricci executed a great many landscape studies in pen and ink. This is a fine and typical example, and it shows his very considerable debt to the woodcuts of Titian and Domenico Campagnola.

NICOLÒ RICCIOLINI
Rome 1687–Rome 1772

177. The Virgin Appearing to St. Bernard of Clairvaux

Pen and brown ink, brown and gray wash, over red chalk. Squared in red chalk. 27.2 x 19.9 cm. Lined.

Inscribed in pen and brown ink along left margin, Il quadro esiste alla Madona de Fornari detta di Loreto; in pen and brown ink at lower center of old mount, Ricci... (the rest cut away).

PROVENANCE: [Kate Ganz]; purchased in London in 1988.

Study, with minor variations, for an altarpiece by Nicolò Ricciolini, signed and dated 1751, in SS. Nome di Maria, Rome (Martini and Casanova, 1962, p. 80, fig. 18; Titii, 1987, II, fig. 1004). St. Bernard, a Doctor of the Church, is represented writing under the inspiration of the Blessed Virgin, who points toward the emblem of her Holy Name. At the lower left, putti hold the crozier and mitre that symbolize St. Bernard’s abbatial authority at Clairvaux.

The drawing was identified as the work of Ricciolini by Lawrence Turčić when it appeared on the art market in London in 1987. Not long before, Turčić had found a larger and more finished study by the artist for the same painting, catalogued under the name of Carlo Maratti in the De Grez Collection at the Musées Royaux de Peinture et de Sculpture, Brussels (Brussels, 1913, no. 2413). The drawing in Brussels was independently recognized as the work of Ricciolini by Maria Barbara Guerrieri Borsoi (Bollettino d’Arte, LXXIII, July–October 1988, pp. 172 and 175, fig. 26).

176. Clearing in a Wooded Landscape

Inscribed in pen and brown ink at lower margin, Omnia 55 1/3 [?]; at right margin, Omnia, in another hand at lower right, Andrea Procaccini.

PROVENANCE: Harry G. Friedman.

This drawing, clearly the work of a follower of Carlo Maratti, had been catalogued under the name of Andrea Procaccini on the basis of the old inscription. Quite recently, however, Maria Barbara Guerrieri Borsoi convincingly identified the sheet as a study by Niccolò Ricciolini for his altarpiece of this subject in the left transept of the Duomo at Mantua. Dottorezza Guerrieri Borsoi plans to publish this drawing and the painting in a forthcoming issue of Bollettino d’Arte.

NICOLA MARIA ROSSI

179. The Virgin Nursing the Christ Child, in a Glory of Angels

Pen and brown ink, brown wash, over red chalk. Verso: faint red chalk studies for seated figures of Christ and God the Father seen in steep perspective. 29.0 x 25.2 cm. Scattered stains.

Inscribed in graphite at lower right, Solimena.

PROVENANCE: Don Sebastien Gabriel de Borbón y Braganza (1811–1875); Don Pedro Alcántara de Borbón y Borbón, Duke of Dúrcal (1862–1892); Dúrcal sale, New York, American Art Galleries, April 10, 1889, no. 160 (2); Henry Walters.

Gift of Henry Walters, 1917
17.236.25

In the catalogue of the 1889 Dúrcal sale, this and the following sheet were listed as works of “Nicolas Rossi, Seventeenth century. Pupil of Luca Giordano.” There was in fact a pupil of Giordano called Nicola Russo or Rosso (Naples 1647–1702), and he was often confused with Nicola Maria Rossi because of their similar names. Our drawings seem more likely to be by the latter. Nicola Maria was a pupil of Solimena, whose influence—albeit in a rather diluted form—is apparent in both drawings. The modern inscription Solimena on each sheet testifies to this stylistic connection.

A considerable group of drawings by Nicola Maria Rossi has been identified in the Cabinet des Dessins of the Musée du Louvre (see Monbeig-Goguel and Vitzthum, 1967, pp. 42, 50–51, nos. 88 and 89). Many of these sheets in Paris have close stylistic affinities with our drawings.

180. Two Kneeling and Two Standing Figures

Pen and brown ink, gray wash, over black chalk. Scribbled figure studies in pen and black chalk on verso. 16.8 x 23.8 cm. Foxed. Stains at lower margin.

Inscribed in graphite on verso, Solimena.

PROVENANCE: Don Sebastien Gabriel de Borbón y Braganza (1811–1875); Don Pedro Alcántara de Borbón y Borbón, Duke of Dúrcal (1862–1892); Dúrcal sale, New York, American Art Galleries, April 10, 1889, no. 160 (1); Henry Walters.

FRANCESCO MARIA SALVETTI
Florence 1691–Florence 1758

181. The Apostles at the Tomb of the Virgin, and Studies for Two Pendentives

Pen and brown ink, brown and gray wash, over black chalk. The perimeter of the lunette incised with a compass. An embossed parochial stamp affixed with sealing wax at top center of sheet. 20.9 x 26.7 cm. Abraded. Scattered stains and losses.

Inscribed in pen and brown ink at lower margin, Io Franc. Maria Salvetti ho fatto il Sud: disegno per la Chiesa della SS. Vergine delle Vedute, quest'uso eseguito, followed by two signatures, Io Gio. Santi montanelli operato mano propria l., o Lorenzo Aleotti operato mano propria.

PROVENANCE: [Jeudwine]; purchased in London in 1966.

Rogers Fund, 1966
66.136

The artist's own inscription identifies the drawing as a study for part of the decoration of a church dedicated to S. Maria delle Vedute. It was W. R. Jeudwine who pointed out in 1966 that this church is in the town of Fucecchio, near Empoli. In the frescoed half-dome of the apse of this church a group of Apostles is gathered around the tomb of the Virgin, but the scale and attitudes of the figures are quite different from those in our drawing.

However, confirmation of the connection of this drawing with the work in S. Maria delle Vedute is supplied by a large study in the Albertina, Vienna (Beschreibender Katalog, vi, 1941, no. 760, repr.), which represents the Virgin in glory and bears the following inscription: Io
Franc: Maria Salvetti ho fatto / il presente disegno per la cupola / della SS. Vergine delle Vedute / Gio. Santi manutelli / operaio mano propria. On the reverse of the drawing is a further inscription, . . . settembre 1738 cominciat a attaccare le carta per disegnare. . . . ottobre principii a dipingere. The central section of the Albertina drawing, which is very close in style to ours, corresponds almost exactly with Salvetti’s fresco in the cupola above the choir of the church. Beneath the cupola are four pendentives with Evangelists such as those studied in our drawing.

Salvetti was a faithful follower of Antonio Domenico Gabbiani, whose style is reflected in both the drawings and in the fresco in the cupola of S. Maria delle Vedute. The differences between our drawing and the painting in the half-dome could be accounted for by later restoration.

Drawings by Salvetti are very rare. In addition to our drawing and that in the Albertina, we know only a signed black chalk representation of his master Gabbiani on his deathbed (Gabinetto Disegni e Stampe degli Uffizi, 3790 F).

GASPA RE SERENAR IO
Palermo 1707—Palermo 1759

182. St. Benedict Orders the Destruction of Idols at Montecassino

Pen and brown ink, brown wash, heightened with yellow and white gouache, over black chalk, on beige paper. 20.9 x 12.0 cm.

Inscribed in graphite on verso, Conca.

Gift of Henry Walters, 1917
17.236.22

The drawing figured in the Durcal sale as the work of Domenico Gargiulo, in spite of the old attribution to Conca on the verso. In 1968 Philip Pouncey noted on the mount, ”seems close to Sebastiano Conca.” Nearly two decades later, Lawrence Turčić pointed out that the drawing appears to be a preparatory study with significant variations for a painting of the same subject by a faithful Palermitan follower of Conca, Gaspare Serenario. This painting was executed in Rome in 1739 and sent to Palermo, where it is now in the Chiesa dell’Origionale (Brugnà, 1985, pp. 461 and 483, no. 2, p. 493, fig 2).

GIROLAMO STARACE
Naples ca. 1730—Naples 1794

184. Christ Falls under the Cross

Black chalk, stumped, pen and black ink, gray wash. Framing lines in pen and black ink at top and sides of sheet. 23.1 x 29.9 cm. Vertical crease at center.

PROVENANCE: Serge Michel (according to vendor); [Mia Weiner]; purchased in New York in 1986.

Giancarlo Sestieri identified this accomplished drawing as the work of Starace. It is a study for a painting above a niche on the left wall of the left transept of Ave Gratia Plena in Marcianise, near Caserta. In both drawing and painting, the lower margin is shaped to an arch to fit above the pediment of the niche. A Crowning with Thorns by Starace hangs above the niche on the opposite wall of the transept.

Nicola Spinosa has published oil sketches, monogrammed and dated 1773, for both these paintings (Spinosa, 1987, p. 132, no. 194, figs. 247 and 248). Drawings by Starace for the Crowning with Thorns were identified by Walter Vitzthum in the Museo di Capodimonte, Naples (Vitzthum, 1966, no. 62, pl. 39, no. 63; the latter drawing repr. Roli and Sestieri, 1981, no. 208).
SEMPRONIO SUBISSATI
Urbino ca. 1680–Madrid 1758

185. Portrait of Francesco Albani

Red chalk, stumped in the portrait medallion, over traces of black chalk. 41.8 x 25.5 cm. Foxed. Lined.

Inscribed in red chalk in cartouche, FRANCISCVS. ALBANO. / PICTOR. EREGIVS. BONONIENSIS. NATVS. / ANNO. MDLXXVII. AD. ALIAM. / GLORIOSAM. VITAM. MIGRAVIT. ROMAE. / ANNO. MDCLX.

PROVENANCE: Nicola Pio; Victor Sordan.

Gift of Victor Sordan, 1970
1970.293

Nicola Pio commissioned from a number of Roman draughtsmen 225 portrait drawings to illustrate his Vita, and each of the 225 Lives concludes with the identification of the artist responsible for the portrait. Thus, the brief Life of Francesco Albani ends, "Il di lui ritratto è stato fatto e delineato da Sempronio Subissati." In addition, portraits of Andrea Sacchi and Carlo Maratti were supplied by Subissati, but these are now lost.

Pio’s manuscript, the title page of which is dated 1724, came to the Vatican in 1746, but it was not until 1977 that it was printed by the Biblioteca Apostolica Vaticana. The author’s collection of drawings and prints was in large part dispersed during his lifetime, and over 140 of the portraits of artists found their way to the Nationalmuseum, Stockholm, having previously figured in the collections of Pierre Crozat and Carl Gustav Tessin. Our drawing does not seem to share this Crozat/Tessin provenance and must have been separated from the group at some early date.

Subissati’s image of Albani is copied from the portrait by Andrea Sacchi that is now in the Museo del Prado, Madrid (Sutherland Harris, 1977, no. 44, pl. 74). Subissati was a pupil of Maratti, who owned the Sacchi portrait until his death, when it was purchased by Philip V of Spain.

The traditional attribution to Tiepolo is no doubt correct, and the sheet, although slight and perhaps in part reworked by a later hand, is close in style to drawings which have been associated with the artist’s work at Udine in the mid-1720s (for example, Rizzi, 1965, nos. 8–11, repr., and Feinblatt, 1967, figs. 1 and 2, pls. 34–38).

Nos. 187 and 188, both drawings of exceptional size and elaborate finish, must have been executed as independent works of art, rather than as preparatory studies. In any case, they do not relate directly to any of Giambattista’s paintings. They are nonetheless strikingly similar in style to frescoes in the Colleoni Chapel at Bergamo, where Giambattista worked in 1732–1733.

The vigorous physical types, the steep perspective, and the dramatic Piazzettesque chiaroscuro that characterize the drawings are all to be found in the Bergamo fresco The Beheading of St. John the Baptist (Morassi, 1962, p. 3, fig. 44; Levey, 1986, fig. 69, in color).

The scene represented here may be the beheading in Milan of St. Nazarius and his youthful companion, St. Celsus, during the persecutions of Nero. Nazarius and Celsus were martyrs venerated in Lombardy and the Veneto, but we know of no earlier representations of their deaths. The composition may be simply a variation on a given theme, the dramatic representation of a scene of martyrdom. The martyrs in No. 188 below cannot be satisfactorily identified, nor can the victim in a drawing of similar dimensions and finish that once belonged to Prince Alexis Orloff and is now in a private collection in Milan (Orloff sale, 1920, no. 162, repr.).

An old copy of the present drawing is in the Hermitage, Leningrad (L. Salmina in Trudy, VIII, 3, 1964, p. 246, repr.).

188. The Beheading of a Male and a Female Saint

Pen and brown ink, brown wash, heightened with white, over black chalk. Framing lines in pen and brown ink. 49.8 x 36.3 cm. Lined.

Blind stamp, a mounter’s mark, at lower right corner, FR (Lugt 1042).

PROVENANCE: Marquis de Biron; purchased in Geneva in 1937.

It has been suggested that the martyrdom represented here is that of St. Cyprian and St. Justina at Nicomedia, but there does not seem to be any iconographic or geographic reason for this identification. Like No. 187 above, this impressive sheet may be dated in the early 1730s.

An old and fairly exact copy of the drawing is in the Musée Départemental des Vosges, Épinal (Cailleux, 1952, no. 1, repr.).

189. The Virgin and Child Enthroned with St. Sebastian and a Franciscan Saint

Pen and brown ink, brown wash, heightened with white, over black chalk, on beige paper. Framing lines in pen and brown ink. 30.8 x 24.8 cm.

PROVENANCE: Marquis de Biron; purchased in Geneva in 1937.

This highly finished drawing, probably not a study for a painting but a work of art in its own right, may be dated in the early 1730s on the basis of its stylistic affinity with Nos. 187 and 188 above.

A fairly exact old copy of our drawing in the Martin von Wagner Museum, Würzburg, is inscribed Gio Batti. Tiepolo inv. / Fran.° Lorenzi delin' (Knox, 1970, p. 222, fig. 4).

A brilliant, highly pictorial exercise that may date from the late 1730s. The same Magi, similarly costumed but quite differently placed in relation to the Virgin and Child, appear in drawings of this subject in the Kupferstichkabinett, Berlin-Dahlem (Dreyer, 1979, no. 74, repr. in color), in the Cleveland Museum of Art (repr. Cleveland Bulletin, XXXIII, 1, 1946, p. 1), and in the Achenbach Foundation for Graphic Arts, San Francisco (Knox, 1970, no. 21, repr.).

This and the following forty-one drawings form a stylistically coherent group, many of them associated with Giambattista’s plans for the ceiling fresco in the gallery of the Palazzo Clerici, Milan.

An album, the binding of which is labeled vari / pensieri / t.i., is preserved in the Horne Foundation, Florence. Forty drawings by Giambattista mounted on thirty-three folios remain in the album; seven have been removed and are kept separately. A pencil inscription on the first page indicates that there were only forty-seven drawings in the album when Horne purchased it in London at the end of the nineteenth century. Internal evidence, such as stubs in the binding and wide skips in the sequence of folio numbers, suggests that the album may originally have contained at least seventy additional drawings.

Like ours, the Horne drawings consist in large part of studies datable on stylistic grounds about 1740. Thus it is possible—though not certain—that Nos. 192–233 of this catalogue may have been removed from the album vari pensieri t.i. and purchased by Guillaume de Gontaut Biron, marquis de Biron (1859–1939), before Herbert Horne acquired the drawings and the binding now in Florence. The original album may have formed one volume in the rich repertory of visual motifs that Giambattista is said to have presented to the Venetian convent of the Somaschi, a religious order of which his son Giuseppe was a member.

This study of Apollo with his lyre, supported by a winged genius, was used with slight variations by Giambattista in an oil sketch (now in the Kimbell Art Museum, Fort Worth) that is generally accepted as the only surviving modello for the Palazzo Clerici ceiling (Morassi, 1962, fig. 319). A related study of Apollo in The Pierpont Morgan Library is not so close to the figure in the oil sketch (IV, 112a; Bean and Stampfle, 1971, no. 75, repr.). An old and quite exact copy of our drawing is in the National Gallery of Art, Washington, D.C. (1956.9.23. Gift of Howard Sturgis).

At the narrow north and south ends of the long gallery in the Palazzo Clerici appear two satyrs and two satyresses seen in steep perspective perched on feigned cornices. The satyress in the southwest corner of the fresco corresponds very closely to the one in this drawing (Morassi, 1955, pl. 26).

These figures may have been studies for the Palazzo Clerici ceiling, but were not utilized. Fifteen such “unused” studies of satyrs and satyresses in the Horne Foundation, Florence, testify to Giambattista’s seemingly inexhaustible inventive powers. Many of these drawings in Florence are very close in style and technique (with spirited accents added in brush and dark brown wash) to the Clerici studies in our collection (Museo Horne, Inv. 6324, 6336–6348, 6350; some repr. Ragghianti Collobi, 1963, pls. 88, 100–103).
199. _Seated River God, Nymph with an Oar, and Putto_

These figures appear at the bottom of the Fort Worth sketch, and the river god and nymph, without the oar and the accompanying putto, are perched on the top-most cornice at the south end of the Palazzo Clerici gallery (Ancona, 1956, pl. 35, in color). A little more than ten years later the nymph and river god were repeated in the frescoed ceiling of the Kaisersaal in the Würzburg Residenz (Freedon and Lamb, 1956, pl. 79, in color).

The transparent washes of this drawing are of a pale golden tone to be found in other drawings by Giambattista, many of them associable with the Palazzo Clerici project. Nos. 200–203, 212–213, and 217–220 below are executed in this golden wash, as are some thirty-seven in the Horne Foundation and ten in The Pierpont Morgan Library.
200. Three Winged Female Figures

A very similar figure of Prudence, seen in steep perspective, holding a large mirror and fitted out with her usual attribute, an extra masklike face on the back of her head, appears in one of the lateral canvases in the ceiling of the Scuola dei Carmini, Venice, on which Tiepolo worked intermittently from 1740 to 1744 (Morassi, 1962, fig. 205). In the Carmini canvas, however, Prudence is attended not by a river god but by allegorical female figures representing Grace and Innocence.

The stance of Prudence in our drawing, and even her skirt, looped over the thigh and caught by a clip in the form of a mask, reappear in the Fort Worth oil sketch for the Clerici ceiling (Morassi, 1962, fig. 319) and in the ceiling itself, where the figure is reversed (Ancona, 1956, pl. 22, in color). However, in both these instances Prudence has become Ceres. Mirror and mask have disappeared, and the standing female figure holds a luxuriant symbolic plant. The same figure reappears more than twenty years later with the attributes of Prudence in the ceiling fresco of the throne room in the Royal Palace, Madrid (Morassi, 1955, pl. 89).

202. River God with an Oar, Woman Holding a Serpent, and a Standing Nude Boy

Pen and brown ink, pale (golden) and dark brown wash, over black chalk. 25.6 x 23.7 cm.

The serpent identifies the female figure as Prudence. A stylistically similar drawing in the Horne Foundation, Florence, shows Prudence with a mirror, reclining beside a standing nude boy, while the symbolic serpent is entwined around a staff at the left (Inv. 6326; Ragghianti Collobi, 1963, pl. 90).

Time and a nude figure of Truth, identified by the sun symbol that she either holds in her hand or that appears above her, are a standard allegorical couple in Giambattista’s iconographic repertory. However, neither this nor the following two variations on the theme are clearly associated with a painting.

The present drawing is perhaps earlier, and it differs stylistically from Nos. 208 and 209 below, which have in common a looser, more transparent handling of pen and wash, as does a related representation of Time and Truth in The Pierpont Morgan Library (Fairfax Murray, iv, 101, repr.). Two other drawings of this subject should be mentioned: one formerly in the Bateson collection, and the other now in the Rijksprentenkabinet, Amsterdam (Hadeln, 1928, i, pls. 20 and 33, respectively).

A copy of our drawing was sold at Sotheby's, London, on October 21, 1963, no. 169. In this copy the whole scythe appears at the bottom of the sheet, which suggests that our drawing may have been trimmed.

Virtue (Virtù) is identified by her attributes: wings, a staff, and a crown of laurel, which is held by a flying putto at the right. Nobility (Nobilìa) holds aloft her emblem, a small statue of Minerva. Widely differing solutions for the pairing of these two allegorical figures are proposed in other drawings by Giambattista, five in The Pierpont Morgan Library (IV, 107; IV, 106; IV, 108; IV, 112; IV, 133a; Bean and Stampfe, 1971, nos. 103–107, repr., respectively) and one in Trieste (Vigni, 1972, no. 111, repr.). There are equally significant compositional differences in Giambattista’s six painted representations of Virtue and Nobility (Morassi, 1962, figs. 343–348).

A drawing in the Barber Institute of Fine Arts, Birmingham, is close to this painted version (Sack, 1910, fig. 113).

226. Bacchus and Ariadne

Pen and brown ink, brown wash, over black chalk. 25.3 x 19.3 cm. All four corners made up.

Inscribed in graphite on verso, 35, in a circle.

PROVENANCE: Marquis de Biron; purchased in Geneva in 1937.

A similar group appears in a ceiling fresco in the Palazzo Labia, Venice (Morassi, 1962, fig. 265). Bacchus grasps a wine flask in his left hand, and with his right holds a diadem of stars above Ariadne’s head. Two other drawings by Giambattista are related to this fresco: one is in the collection of Joan K. Davidson, New York (Knox, 1970, no. 36, repr.), the other—closest to the finished work—is in a French private collection (Cailleux, 1952, no. 23, pl. 6).
227. Virtue Crowning a Bearded Man

Pen and brown ink, pale and dark brown wash, over black chalk. 25.8 x 25.6 cm.

Inscribed in graphite on verso, 14.

PROVENANCE: Marquis de Biron; purchased in Geneva in 1937.

Wings, staff, and a laurel crown held aloft identify the female figure as Virtue, while the owl must symbolize the wisdom of the old man.

228. Apotheosis of a Warrior

Pen and brown ink, brown wash, over black chalk. 25.0 x 31.7 cm. Upper corners made up.

Illegible number in graphite on verso.

PROVENANCE: Marquis de Biron; purchased in Geneva in 1937.

A similar laurel-crowned warrior, with one hand on the neck of a lion and a baron in the other, a trumpet-bearing figure of Fame above him, occurs at the center of the Glorification of Francesco Barbaro, a ceiling painting executed about 1745–1750 for the Palazzo Barbaro, Venice, now in The Metropolitan Museum of Art (23.128. Anonymous Gift in memory of Oliver H. Payne, 1923; Morassi, 1955, fig. 27; Zeri and Gardner, 1973, pp. 56–57, pl. 61).
229. Aged Dignitary Attended by Mercury and Prudence

Pen and brown ink, pale and dark brown wash, over black chalk. 29.6 x 24.8 cm. Upper margin made up.

Inscribed in graphite on verso, 10.

PROVENANCE: Marquis de Biron; purchased in Geneva in 1937.

Rogers Fund, 1937

Anthony bows to kiss the hand of Cleopatra, as he does in an oil sketch by Giambattista in a private collection in New York (Everett Fahy in Wrightman Collection. V, 1973, no. 24, repr. in color). A stylistically similar pen and wash drawing of this subject is now in the Woodner collection, New York (New York, 1990, no. 40, repr. in color). Mr. Woodner's drawing comes even closer to the group in the oil sketch, where Cleopatra's head is seen in profile.

The New York oil sketch is now generally considered to be a study for Giambattista's splendid fresco in the Palazzo Labia, Venice, The Meeting of Anthony and Cleopatra, though in the fresco Anthony greets Cleopatra without kissing her hand (Levey, 1986, p. 146, pl. 136, in color).

234. The Holy Family

Pen and brown ink, brown wash, over black chalk. Red chalk scribbles on verso. 26.6 x 19.3 cm.

PROVENANCE: Probably convent of the Somaschi, S. Maria della Salute, Venice, suppressed in 1810; conte Leopoldo Cicognara; Antonio Canova, the sculptor; his half brother, Monsignor Giovanni Battista Sartori-Canova; Francesco Pesaro, Venice; purchased from him in 1842 by Edward Cheney, Badger Hall, Shropshire; by inheritance to his brother-in-law, Colonel Alfred Capel Cure, Blake Hall, Ongar, Essex; sale, London, Sotheby's, April 29, 1885, from lot 1024, nine volumes, to Parsons at £15; then possibly to an Irish private collector, and subsequently to William Fagg of Sydenham; [Batsford]; sale, London, Christie's, July 14, 1914, from lot 49, three albums, to Parsons at £120; [Parsons]; [Savile Gallery]; Alexandria Sinsheimer.

Giambattista executed, probably in the 1750s, a long series of variations on the theme of the Holy Family. More than sixty such designs were in an album said to have been presented by the artist to the convent of the Somaschi at S. Maria della Salute in Venice. This album was broken up in the 1920s, and the contents widely dispersed in Europe and America. Two studies of the Holy Family from this source are in the Robert Lehman Collection at the Metropolitan Museum (George Knox in Lehman Collection, vi, 1987, nos. 93 and 94, repr.).

Bibliography: Chicago, 1958, no. 76, repr.; Toledo, 1940, no. 87; Wellesley, 1960, no. 62; Annual Report, 1974–1975, p. 50.
Bequest of Harry G. Sperling, 1971

This and very probably the following drawing come from a group of at least twenty-six studies of single standing draped figures that belonged to Dan Fellows Platt, who may well have purchased them from Parsons in London. These drawings were dispersed in the late 1930s, but seven are in the Art Museum, Princeton University (Bean, 1966, nos. 86–88, repr.; Gibbons, 1977, nos. 590, 619–622, 626, 627, repr.). These figure studies that once belonged to Platt are very similar in subject and style to eighty-nine drawings preserved in an album with the title Sole Figure Vestita T:1, once in the collection of Edward Cheney and now in the Victoria and Albert Museum, London (Knox, 1975, nos. 43, 131–176, 187–194, 212–221, 252–254, 261, 276–295, repr.).

238. Figure Studies

Pen and brown ink, over black chalk, on beige paper. 25.1 x 34.1 cm. Scattered stains.

Inscribed in pen and brown ink on verso, N° 2265. X°: 12; above, in graphite, 487 (Bossi-Beyerlen "code number"; see Knox, 1980, 1, pp. 200–207).

These figures seen in steep perspective are presumably studies for ceiling decoration; the summary facial notions and the stumpy treatment of hands and feet are typical of Giambattista’s most abbreviated pen sketches. Such sheets are difficult to date, but the present example could be late rather than early. In any case the spacious mise en page may be contrasted with the crowded arrangement of heavy figures in a sheet with the same Bossi-Beyerlen provenance, now in Stuttgart, which Knox dates to the late 1720s (Stuttgart, 1970, no. 4, repr.).

239. An Eagle with Wings Spread

Black chalk, heightened with white, on blue paper. 34.7 x 24.8 cm. All four margins irregular. Scattered stains.

Inscribed in pen and brown ink on verso, 24 x N° 293; above, in graphite, 401 (Bossi-Beyerlen "code number"; see Knox, 1980, 1, pp. 200–207).

PROVENANCE: Giovanni Domenico Bossi; Maria Theresa Karoline Bossi; Karl Christian Friedrich Beyerlen; sale, Stuttgart, H. G. Gutekunst, March 27–28, 1882, lot no. uncertain; H. Wendland, marquis de Birou; purchased in Geneva in 1937.

George Knox, who attributes this drawing to Giambattista, suggests that it is a study for the eagle that appears hovering in the sky in a ceiling fresco of 1743 in the Palazzo Pisani-Moretta a S. Polo, Venice (Morassi, 1962, fig. 259). The correspondence is indeed fairly close, and the possibility that the drawing is a copy—perhaps by Domenico—should not be entirely excluded. Knox records four further drawings that he associates with the ceiling of the Palazzo Pisani-Moretta (Knox, 1980, i, D.130, M.3, M.279, M.702, the latter repr. ii, pl. 33).
GIOVANNI BATTISTA TIEPOLO (NO. 239)

240. Three Dogs, after Paolo Veronese

Black chalk, heightened with white, on blue paper. 33.3 x 23.3 cm. Horizontal crease at center. All four corners made up.

These three dogs' heads are, as George Knox pointed out, copied from Paolo Veronese's Family of Darius before Alexander. The two spaniels appear at the extreme left of Veronese's composition; the dog lightly sketched in profile at the lower right of the sheet appears at the extreme right in the painting. Knox catalogues two further chalk drawings after details of the painting by Veronese, one in Leningrad, the other in Melbourne. These he attributes, as he does the present drawing, to Giambattista Tiepolo (Knox, 1980, i, nos. B.6, M.220, respectively, the latter repr. ii, pl. 31).

Veronese's painting is now in the National Gallery, London, but in the eighteenth century it hung in the Palazzo Pisani-Moretta a S. Polo, where Giambattista executed a ceiling fresco about 1740–1745 (see No. 239 above). Francesco Algarotti wrote in 1751 to P.-J. Mariette that he had intended to commission a copy of the "Famiglia di Dario dinanzi ad Alessandro della casa Pisani al Tiepolo" (Bortari and Ticozzi, vii, 1822, pp. 390–391). It is possible that the drawn copies taken from details of Veronese's picture may be associated with this proposed commission from Algarotti.

The two spaniels in our drawing reappear side by side and in reverse at the upper left in an etching inscribed L. Bajta Tiepolo inv. et pinx. / L. Dominicus filius sculp. (Rizzi, 1971, no. 151, repr.).

The drawing has been generally accepted as a good example of Giambattista as a caricaturist. However, in 1971 James Byam Shaw suggested that "the wash lacks the transparency of Giambattista's, and the pen work is scratchy and of indifferent quality." He proposed that the drawing might be a copy by Lorenzo Tiepolo after a lost original by his father, Giambattista. Another drawing of this elderly couple, in the Victoria and Albert Museum, is a copy of clearly inferior quality (Knox, 1975, no. 311, repr.).

Byam Shaw has also pointed out that figures in this pose appear—the old woman shown younger and masked, the old man transformed into Punchinello—in The Country Walk, one of Domenico Tiepolo's Punchinello drawings (Gealt, 1986, no. 93, repr.).

242. The Three Angels Appearing to Abraham by the Oaks of Mamre (Genesis 18:1–3)

Pen and brown ink, brown wash, over black chalk. 40.0 x 27.6 cm. Upper and lower margins irregular.

PROVENANCE: Marquis de Biron; purchased in Geneva in 1937.

Rogers Fund, 1937

This drawing figured in the Biron collection as the work of Giambattista. In 1952 Antonio Morassi recognized the sheet as an early work of Domenico, who has fairly closely copied a drawing by his father that is now in the Museo Civico, Bassano (Knox, 1965, p. 394, no. 8, pl. 23). Giambattista’s drawing was one of a series of finished compositions engraved by Pietro Monaco (Knox, 1965, fig. 9).

243. The Assumption of the Virgin

Pen and black ink, gray wash, over red chalk. 37.6 x 26.7 cm. (the drawing itself). Strips of gray washed paper have been added at the irregular left and lower margins by a later hand.

Signed in pen and black ink at lower right, Dott’ Tiepolo f.

PROVENANCE: Marquis de Biron; purchased in Geneva in 1937.

Rogers Fund, 1937

This subject was often represented by Domenico. The Virgin is shown either with hands clasped, as in a drawing in The Pierpont Morgan Library (IV, 151c; Byam Shaw, 1962, pl. 24), or with arms outstretched, as here and in another sheet in the Morgan Library (IV, 151d).

244. The Holy Family with Two Female Saints

Pen and black ink, gray wash, over traces of black chalk. Framing lines in pen and black ink. 33.3 x 16.7 cm. Arched top.

provenance: Eugène Rodrigues (Lugt 897); marquis de Biron; purchased in Geneva in 1937.

George Knox pointed out that this is a free copy by Domenico of his own signed altarpiece of 1777 now in S. Nicolò, Padua (Mariuz, 1971, p. 131, pl. 275). This painting was originally in the now-suppressed church of S. Agnese at Padua. The female saints are described in a late eighteenth-century guide as Sts. Frances of Rome and St. Eurosia (Brandolese, 1795, p. 182). Eurosia, whose intercession was invoked for protection against bad weather, is identified by the lightning bolt that appears at her breast in our drawing and in the sky above her in the painting.

The drawing is valuable as a record of the original composition, for in the painting a kneeling angel at lower left was added later by G. B. Mengardi. Knox identified in the Museo Correr, Venice, three chalk studies on blue paper for the hands of the Virgin and the female saints (Knox, 1966, nos. 98–100, repr.; Knox, 1980, 1, p. 142, nos. D.114–D.116, II, no. D.114 repr. pl. 316), and he called attention to a related pen and gray wash composition study by Domenico in which St. Joseph is omitted and St. Eurosia on the right is shown with her hands and feet amputated (London, Sotheby’s, June 25, 1970, no. 54, repr.; London, Sotheby’s, March 23, 1971, no. 73, repr.).
245. The Baptism of Christ

PROVENANCE: Hamilton Easter Field (Lugt Supp. 872a); [Anderson Galleries]; purchased in New York in 1918.

Domenico Tiepolo repeatedly treated this biblical subject, introducing innumerable picturesque variations on the given theme. The Graphische Sammlung, Stuttgart, possesses thirteen such representations of the Baptism (Stuttgart, 1970, nos. 44–56, repr.), thirteen more were dispersed with the Beauchamp collection in 1965 (sale, London, Christie’s, June 15, 1965, nos. 6–18, repr.), and six are in the Robert Lehman Collection here at the Metropolitan Museum (James Byam Shaw in Lehman Collection. VI, 1987, nos. 114–119, repr.).
246. Study of a Garden Sculpture: Venus?

Pen and brown ink, brown wash, over black chalk. 27.7 x 12.6 cm. Narrow strips of paper have been added at irregular upper and lower margins. Repaired tear at upper right.

Signed in pen and brown ink at lower right, Dom' Tiepolo (the rest cut away).

PROVENANCE: Luigi Grassi (Lugt Supp. 1171b); sale, London, Sotheby's, May 13, 1924, no. 132; Robert Lehman.

Gift of Robert Lehman, 1941
41.187.1

Four similar studies of statues of pagan deities, two of them from the Luigi Grassi sale, are in the Robert Lehman Collection at the Metropolitan Museum (James Byam Shaw in Lehman Collection, VI, 1987, nos. 135-138, repr.).

247. Study of a Garden Sculpture: Leda?

Pen and brown ink, brown wash, over traces of black chalk. 25.5 x 13.6 cm. Narrow strips of paper added to irregular upper margin.

Signed in pen and brown ink at lower right, Dom' Tiepolo (f).

PROVENANCE: Luigi Grassi (Lugt Supp. 1171b); sale, London, Sotheby's, May 13, 1924, probably no. 129, "A Goddess turned to the right, holding a drapery"; Robert Lehman.

Gift of Robert Lehman, 1941
41.187.5

James Byam Shaw has suggested that this drawing represents Leda holding "a very small swan." The drapery behind the figure would have been intended as a support for the statue.
248. Centaur Holding Up a Youthful Satyr

Pen and brown ink, brown wash, over black chalk. 19.2 x 27.4 cm.

Signed in pen and brown ink at lower left, Domi Tiepolo f.; numberbered in pen and brown ink at upper left, 132; numbered in pen and

This drawing and the ten that follow are part of a large group of representations of satyrs and centaurs (with satyresses and centauresses) in landscape settings. The drawings in this series, all horizontal in format, are very numerous. Four are in the Robert Lehman Collection at The Metropolitan Museum of Art (James Byam Shaw in Lehman Collection. VI, 1987, nos. 140–143, repr.), nine are in the British Museum (Cailleux, 1974, nos. 7, 8, 38, 40, 46, 54, 58, 74, 78, repr.), six are in the Art Museum, Princeton University (Cailleux, 1974, nos. 6, 14, 39, 55, 66, 67, repr.), and six are in the Uffizi (Cailleux, 1974, nos. 1, 2, 5, 9, 85, 86, repr.). More than sixty additional drawings of this kind are to be found in private and public collections here and abroad.
These variations on a theme, painstakingly listed by Jean Cailleux, are rightly hailed by James Byam Shaw as perhaps the most charming and original of all Domenico's inventions.

The centaur and satyr represented here occur as well in one of the frescoes from the Tiepolo family villa at Zianigo, now in the Ca' Rezzonico, Venice (Mariuz, 1971, pl. 359), and in a drawing in the Punchinello series, in which the satyr becomes a young clown (Gealr, 1986, no. 59, repr.).

The sheet is numbered at upper left, 132; a drawing in a private collection abroad bears the number 144, and one of the drawings in the Robert Lehman Collection appears to be numbered 197. Thus a good many of the centaur and satyr drawings seem to have disappeared.

The turbaned oriental lancer is an exotic visitor to the typical northern Italian town seen at the left. This combination of the familiar and unfamiliar is a good example of Domenico’s taste for the bizarre.

This diverting composition is one of a large group of finished independent drawings representing scenes of contemporary life that are certainly Domenico’s most considerable achievement as a draughtsman. These genre scenes are all of the same large horizontal format, and the date 1791 appears on at least twenty of them.

Two of our acrobats, the actress holding a fan, and several of the spectators behind the barricade reappear in Pulcinella e i saltimbanchi, one of Domenico’s frescoes from the Villa Tiepolo at Zianigo, now in the Ca’ Rezzonico, Venice (Mariuz, 1971, pl. 372).

Domenico's proficiency as a caricaturist is well exemplified by this sheet, which if it were not signed might easily be taken for the work of his father, Giambattista.

Above the standing gentleman appears a bouquet of the character heads that occur in many of Domenico's paintings and etchings; at the left border there are sketches of a hand and the tip of a quiver.

This monochrome oil sketch on paper was recognized by Dwight C. Miller as a modello by Felice Torelli for his painting of this subject in S. Anastasia, Verona, datable about 1727 (Miller, 1964, pp. 60 and 63, fig. 16). The principal difference between this sketch and the finished work is that in the latter the Virgin seated on clouds appears at the top of the composition. Another oil sketch attributed to Torelli, in the Detroit Institute of Arts (66.250, Gift of Mr. and Mrs. Richard E. Randall), includes the Virgin at the top of the composition and is in every way very close to the finished painting.

Jörg Garms was the first to recognize this drawing as Vanvitelli’s design for a proposed new throne for the bronze statue of the Prince of the Apostles, generally attributed to Arnolfo di Cambio, in St. Peter’s, Rome. In 1754 the old throne was judged inadequate, and Vanvitelli was commissioned to execute a new one to be made of bardiglio, an Italian veined marble. The throne following Vanvitelli’s design was executed, but its rich baroque design failed to please, and two years later it was replaced by the chair in Quattrocento style that is still in place today.

The appearance of Vanvitelli’s throne can be ascertained from a small model in the Archivio della Fabbrica di S. Pietro, which closely follows our drawing, except for the addition of a putto’s head above St. Peter (Roberto Pane in Vanvitelli, 1973, pp. 83–89, figs. 208 and 209). The Cooper-Hewitt Museum possesses a pen drawing by Vanvitelli that is probably a project for the throne of St. Peter as we see it today (Dec, 1970, no. 52, repr.).

In the nineteenth century the drawing was attributed to Francesco Zuccarelli, but Larissa Salmina Haskell and Terisio Pignatti independently recognized the hand of Giuseppe Zais. Indeed, the loose pen work and soft gray washes may be found in the artist’s signed landscapes in the Hermitage, Leningrad ( Salmina, 1964, nos. 86, 87, repr.), in the Nationalmuseum, Stockholm ( Bjurström, 1974, no. 104, repr.), and in the Cini Foundation, Venice ( Bертагно, 1963, no. 124, repr.).

This and the following large imaginary landscape were executed in 1766, at the very end of the elder Zanetti’s long life. The autograph inscription indicates that this drawing was begun at Gambarare and finished at Fossa Lovara; Alessandro Bertagno has kindly informed us that these were two country properties between Venice and Padua that belonged to the collector, scholar, and amateur artist Anton Maria Zanetti, the elder. Our drawings come from the Liechtenstein collection, as do four others, similar in size and style, that are now in Italian private collections (Bettagno, 1972, nos. 64–67, repr.). All six drawings are inventions inspired by the pen and wash landscapes of Marco Ricci.

270. The Visitation of Our Lady

(Luke 1:39–56)

Purchase, David L. Klein, Jr. Memorial Foundation, Inc. Gift, 1986
1986.49

Composition study with slight variations for the principal figures—Elizabeth, the Blessed Virgin, Zechariah, and Joseph—in the Visitation in S. Eustachio, Rome. This large painting, in the left transept of the church, is signed and dated 1727 (Guerrieri Borsoi, 1984, p. 64, fig. vi; Titii, 1987, 11, fig. 624). Six other chalk studies for figures in this Visitation are catalogued by Guerrieri Borsoi, and Coleman has reproduced a large chalk composition study in the Biblioteca Ambrosiana, Milan (Coleman, 1989, p. 27, fig. 2).
271. Christ Blessing

Black chalk, heightened with white, on grayish brown paper. Verso: faint black chalk study of the same figure and three studies for a left hand. 42.7 x 27.6 cm.

Inscribed on verso in pen and brown ink at lower right, paoli 2.

Provenance: Margot Gordon and Marcello Aldega.

Bibliography: Annual Report, 1985–1986, p. 22; Coleman, 1989, p. 28, fig. 7 (recto), fig. 8 (verso).

Gift of Margot Gordon and Marcello Aldega, 1986 1986.36

This figure of the risen Christ appears in the upper part of St. Vincent Ferrer Performing Miracles of Healing, an altarpiece in the left transept of S. Domenico, Modena. Another drawing for the risen Christ has survived; it differs from the present study in that the legs of Christ are covered with drapery, as is the case in the painting (Guerrieri Borsoi, 1984, pp. 82–83, the painting fig. XV, the drawing of the draped figure no. 45 r., repr.).

The old inscription paoli 2 on the verso indicates the price or evaluation of the drawing. A paolo was a Roman silver coin first minted in the reign of Paul III Farnese. A number of Zoboli’s drawings bear such prices, the figures ranging from one to four paoli.

Until quite recently this attractive landscape drawing has been somewhat tentatively attributed to Francesco Zuccarelli. In a letter of August 7, 1989, Marco Chiarini suggests a convincing alternative, remarking that the handling of pen and wash reminds him of drawings by Giuseppe Zocchi. The use of blue paper, however, is unusual—if not unique—for the artist.

PROVENANCE: “Reliable Venetian Hand” (Lugt Supp. 3005c–d); mark mistakenly associated with Pierre Crozat (Lugt 474); sale, London, Sotheby’s, March 15, 1966, no. 38; [Colnaghi]; purchased in London in 1966.

On Christmas Eve in 1517 St. Cajetan had a vision in which the Blessed Virgin offered him the Christ Child. Cajetan is here identified by his attribute, a branch of lilies, and by the high-collared habit of the Theatine order, of which he was one of the founders.

Attributions to Gaetano Zompini inscribed in the “Reliable Venetian Hand” appear on five further drawings, all similar in style to the present example (Bettagno, 1966, nos. 118, 120–122, 183, repr.).

This design was etched by Francesco Zucchi (1692—1764) as an illustration for COMMENTARII HISTORICI DE REBUS PERTINENTIBUS AD ANGELUM MARIAM S. R. E. CARDINALEM QUIRINUM (Brescia, 1764), a work celebrating the life and achievements of Cardinal Angelo Maria Querini (Venice 1680—Brescia 1754), who was created cardinal and named Bishop of Brescia in 1727. Querini was a distinguished bibliophile; he was for a time librarian of the Vatican, and in 1747 he founded the important Biblioteca Civica Queriniana in Brescia (for Zucchi's print see Brescia, 1980, p. 25, no. 7, repr.).

Many of the illustrations in this work were adapted by Zugno from grisaille paintings, executed by two local artists of modest talent, on the walls of the main staircase of the Biblioteca Queriniana. Our drawing represents the infant Querini being presented to Venice by Nobility, who is accompanied by Religion, Doctrine, and Liberty. The putto in the foreground holds a cardinal's hat above the Querini arms.

We know three other circular drawings for the etchings in this publication, all inscribed (or signed) Zogno dis. In the Museum of Fine Arts, Budapest, there is a drawing representing Querini as a student in the Collegio dei Nobili at Brescia (Fenyő, 1965, no. 98, repr.; for the print see Brescia, 1980, p. 26, no. 8, repr.). In addition, Janos Scholz possesses a drawing of Querini appointed to a Papal commission on Greek liturgy, and Joseph McCrindle has a roundel showing Querini created cardinal by Benedict XIII (Zucchi's prints repr. Brescia, 1980, p. 34, no. 16, and p. 39, no. 21, respectively).

Janos Scholz was the first to connect these drawings with Cardinal Querini, and we are grateful to Bernard Aikema for recently calling our attention to the 1980 exhibition catalogue Iconografia e immagini queriniane, which made possible the identification of the specific purpose of the drawings.

This large drawing, in which the forms are modeled in transparent red wash applied over summary indications in black chalk, appears to be Italian and to date from the eighteenth century. Coma, whose name is inscribed on the reverse of the sheet, may be excluded, although the drawing has a somewhat Neapolitan air.

We are unable to identify this tumultuous scene. At the center a priest and a bishop are about to be put to death by the sword, while an angel descends with the palm and crown of martyrdom. A violent military engagement occupies the foreground. The complex stowed composition seen in exaggeratedly steep perspective looks back to late sixteenth-century Venetian prototypes, such as Jacopo Tintoretto’s painting in the center of the ceiling of the Sala del Maggior Consiglio, Palazzo Ducale, Venice (Schulz, 1968, pl. 104).

Perhaps a study for a small devotional picture representing the Virgin with the Christ Child. Some thirty years ago Anthony M. Clark proposed the name of Agostino Masucci for this drawing, but the physical types seem somewhat heavy and the pen work rather coarse for this refined artist.
280. Design for a Ceiling Painting

Black chalk, pen and black ink. Squared in black chalk. 27.2 x 17.9 cm. Brown pigment stain at upper right. Scattered stains. Lined. Numbered in black chalk along left margin, 2 3 4 7.

Provenance: Cephas G. Thompson.

Bibliography: Metropolitan Museum Handbook, 1895, p. 46, no. 822, "Unknown (Late Roman School).—Mythological Scene."

Jennifer Montagu kindly suggests that the principal figure may be an allegorical representation of Virtue. Certain of Ripa’s requirements for Virtù are satisfied: she holds a spear in her right hand, the sun is present (though moved from her breast to the upper left corner of the composition), tiny wings seem to grow from her forehead, and a putto bears a cornucopia of fruit.

The steep perspective of the composition and the squaring of the sheet may indicate that the drawing is a study for a small ceiling painting rather than a book illustration. The draughtsman was no doubt a Roman artist of the first decades of the eighteenth century influenced by painters such as Giuseppe Chiari, Luigi Garzi, and Giovanni Odazzi.

In Harry G. Sperling’s collection this fine study was attributed to Marco Benefial. However, the draughtsmanship seems tighter and more academic than Benefial’s loose handling of chalk.

Although George Knox attributes the drawing on the recto to Lorenzo Tiepolo and the sketch on the verso to Giambattista himself, it seems to us that both sides are the work of the same hand, that of an unidentified imitator or copyist.
